Heat Kills 4, 20 Collapse; Relief Today Is Unlikely

93 Is Forecast Here After Thunderstorms Strike Nearby Areas But Skirt District

The heat killed four persons here yesterday, prostrated 20 others, and claimed two other lives by drowning at nearby Maryland beaches.

Thus 12 consecutive days of abnormally high temperatures have been responsible for at least 23 deaths here.

Once again the weatherman could offer little in the way of cooler weather. Today and tomorrow will be like yesterday—and yesterday the mercury rose to 96. For today a maximum of 93 is foreseen; for tomorrow perhaps a degree or two less. But no real break in the tropical wave.

There were several violent thundershowers in nearby Maryland and Virginia last night, but all Washington got was a sprinkling shower.

Fairfax County experienced an intensive electric storm, and lightning set two barns on fire there, causing damage estimated at about $10,000.

Heat victims here yesterday were:

Mrs. E. Grattan Kerans, 64, of 1305 Kennedy street northwest, a prominent clubwoman, who succumbed to a heat stroke at Sibley Hospital.

Mrs. Ruth E. Burke, 44, of 5204 Western avenue, Chevy Chase, wife of a dental surgeon, succumbed to a heart attack brought on by the heat.

Grover Dulin, 51, of 824 Eighth street northwest, found dead at his home by an Emergency Hospital ambulance physician.

Isiah Ruffin, 57, colored, of 828 Twelfth street northwest, who collapsed in Schotts court northeast.

Drowning Victims

The drowning victims were:

Frank Edinger, 72, of 1325 Staples street northeast, a carpenter.

Eugene Thompson, 25, of 260 Daniels street, Cottage City, Md., a gas station attendant.

Edinger toppled from a boat chair while returning from fishing in the Patuxent River near Broomes Island. Members of his family said he appeared to suffer a stroke or heart attack, though he had been in excellent health.

A son, William Edinger, 33, a printer who lives at the Staples street address, dived for the body for 20 minutes without success. Members of the fishing party included Mrs. William Edinger, Thomas Gartland, 1526 Neal street northeast; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kahoun, and their daughter, Patsy, 9.

Thompson drowned in Chesapeake Bay off Breezy Point despite the efforts of his wife and a companion to save him. Thompson and his wife, who is 22, dove off a rowboat. The current was unusually strong, according to witnesses.

Mrs. Thompson and Broadus Weaver, 32, of Cottage City, attempted to rescue him. The body was swept away by the current. Miss Esther Scott, of Washington, was also in the boat.

Lightning Ignites Barns

A bolt of lightning ignited the dairy barn on the farm of C. K. Rollins, Sterling, Fairfax County. A silo also burned. A second silo was blown down as the Herndon Volunteer Fire Department fought the blaze.

Lightning also razed the barn of Herbert Poland at Pleasant Valley, Fairfax County. Large stocks of corn, wheat and straw, and a calf were lost in the fire. Herndon firemen, on leaving the Sterling blaze, raced to Pleasant Valley to aid Leesburg volunteers.

At Herndon, Va., a heavy rain and windstorm cut off electric lights for more than two hours. Residents reported that hail accompanied the storm.

Summers Sees Favorable D.C. Vote Report

Reiterates Prediction Judiciary Committee Will Pass Resolution

Chairman Sumners reiterated his forecast yesterday that the House Judiciary Committee would report favorably on his resolution paving the way for national representation as he prepared to call a second session, probably for tomorrow.

The committee questioned Paul Lesh, attorney and vice chairman of the Citizens' Committee on National Representation, on the jurisdictional issues involved but took no vote.

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, disclosed that he will talk today with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt about the prospects for District suffrage, while attending a meeting of the Arthurdale committee at Hyde Park.

Meanwhile Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, propounded the argument that a Constitutional amendment is not necessary to enable the residents of Washington to vote for the President and Vice President and to have representation in Congress.

300 Lose Lives, Hundreds Hurt In Earthquakes

London, July 30 (AP).—Reuters, British news agency, reported from Ankara tonight that 300 persons were killed and several hundred injured in violent earthquakes in the Central Plateau of Anatolia today. Twelve villages were said to have been destroyed.

The center of the quake was reported to be Yozgad but the upheaval was felt in Ankara, Erzincan, Tokat, Kayseri, Amasyi, Sinop and other districts.

The Istanbul observatory registered a shock centering about 300 miles away. Help was being organized in the capital.

Willkie Gets Pledge of Aid From Seabury

Al Smith Announces He'll Back Nominee As 'True Democrat'

By the Associated Press

Colorado Springs, July 30.—Wendell L. Willkie received a message of support today from Samuel Seabury, former New York Court of Appeals Justice who directed a 1931-32 investigation into the New York City government.

Seabury, whom Willkie described to a press conference as "one of the leading fighters against city machines," said in a telegram that "the cherished tradition against a third term is now sought to be consigned to the scrap heap."

Turning to other subjects, Willkie said he would talk Saturday regarding Republican organizational problems with Chairman Joe Martin of the Republican National Committee; John Hamilton, Martin's executive assistant; Sam Pryor of Connecticut, eastern campaign manager, and possibly Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota.

After hearing that Alfred E. Smith had indorsed him for the Presidency, Willkie described Smith as a man whose principles had been followed by President Roosevelt.

Willkie recalled that Mr. Roosevelt said recently that the minds of some of Willkie's supporters among the Democrats ran more to money than to humanity. Then the nomi-

8 Feared Dead, 150 Hurt In Great Camden Factory Fire

By the Associated Press

Camden, N. J., July 30.—Flames touched off by a series of explosions in a paint factory swept four blocks of central Camden today, killing at least one factory employe, hiding the fate of seven others, and destroying the million-dollar plant, 67 adjoining homes and small business places.

Raymond Harter, 40, an employe of the extensive R. M. Hollingshead Company Paint and Chemical Factory, where the blaze started at noon, succumbed to burns in a hospital—first known fatality of a disaster officials feared might have caused ten or more deaths.

At least seven workers in the plant were officially reported missing after the fire had been brought under control. Some 150 other persons, including firemen, were injured, two of them so seriously that physicians said they might die of burns.

So fierce and widespread was the blaze that Mayor George E. Brunner decreed a state of emergency and 500 National Guardsmen patroled the area with rifles as a protection against looting of homes and business establishments.

One suspected looter was menaced by a crowd as police sought to take him to headquarters for questioning.

Firemen said it would be daylight before the ruins of the Hollingshead plant cooled sufficiently to permit a search for bodies.

The factory's president, R. M. Hollingshead, jr., said the company was handling an order for United States Navy gun paint but that he saw "no possibility" of sabotage.

At last four men and three women workers are feared to have perished in the building, he reported.

No more accurate check could be made until morning, Hollingshead said, because the employes of the plant were so widely distributed.

He estimated the loss of the plant alone at about $1,000,000 but officials had not had a chance to estimate the loss in the fire area, four blocks bounded by Ninth, Tenth, Cooper and Market streets. It was only four blocks from Camden's high-towered City Hall.

Acting Fire Chief Ralph Bakly expressed a fear the death toll might be higher than Hollingshead's estimate.

"There are some (bodies) in there. How many I don't know. The explosions blew out a wall where a lot of girls were working."

Red Cross officials, swiftly marshalling disaster relief facilities, even in Philadelphia, across the Delaware River, reported more than 300 persons homeless. The Naval Militia Armory, Convention Hall and the Camden Civic Center were stocked with cots and clothing to care for them.

The first explosion jarred the entire city of Camden while half of the paint company's 300 employes were at lunch. Other blasts—witnesses counted as many as 35—came at intervals of only a few minutes as the flames reached highly combustible chemicals.

Senate Group Favors Active Duty for Guard

Approves President's Request for Power To Mobilize Reserves

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday gave swift approval to President Roosevelt's request for power to order the National Guard and Army Reserves personnel into immediate active service.

By unanimous vote, the committee approved the unprecedented peace-time mobilization after a single hearing, in which Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, testified:

"We have got to have men—a lot of men—and we have to have them quickly."

Earlier yesterday, the committee broke off discussion of the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill in angry controversy, amid growing indications that the compulsory military training measure is shaping into the most explosive issue before Congress.

The committee already has approved, section by section, a tentative draft of the measure. Final action to report the bill to the Senate had been expected yesterday, but the vote was sidetracked after a bitter session climaxed by Republican demands that President Roosevelt state his views on conscription and Democratic charges that the G. O. P. is playing politics with defense.

President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday declined to

British Bomb Nazi Barges, Take-off Ports

Lull in German Raids Reported as R.A.F. Hits Invasion Centers

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 30.—Britain enjoyed a comparative lull in Nazi aerial attacks today, but according to air ministry officials Germany did not because Royal Air Force bombers, in cooperation with French airmen, hammered at war industries plants, air bases and communication lines in Germany and the Low Countries this morning and last night.

[Repeated air raids have virtually paralyzed England's south and east coast harbors, informed German sources claimed today, driving seaborne commerce to the west coast, where ports are inadequately equipped to handle the increased traffic.]

During isolated raids on widely separated parts of Britain today three German planes were shot down, London authorities said, while one R. A. F. bomber was lost in British attacks.

The official report said 21 German raiders were shot down during big raids against this country yesterday, but unofficial reports estimated the total number destroyed at 25. One

Britons Warned To Be Prepared For Poison Gas

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 30.—While persistent reports circulated in London that Germany is manufacturing large quantities of poison gas, Sir John Anderson, minister of home security, warned the British in a broadcast tonight to practice wearing their masks and to be prepared against poison gas sprayed by bombers from the air.

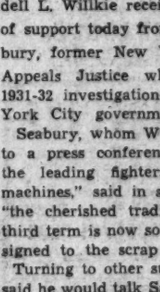
The possibility of a gas attack, said Sir John, made it all the more imperative that everyone should take cover during an air raid. He stressed this point, leading to the fear that gas will be dropped from planes this time instead of in shells, as in the last war.

These comments of a responsible minister tended to support reports of Germany's plan to use gas in the blitzkrieg against Britain. These reports said the Germans will first spray gas on airports in an effort to knock out personnel of the fighter command and give German bombers a comparatively unhindered crack at vital military objectives inside the country.

The Gallup Poll: Roosevelt Leads Willkie in California But Democratic Strength Drops Sharply

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 30.—The nomination of Wendell Willkie by the Republicans has profoundly altered Democratic Party fortunes in California, whose 22 electoral votes make it one of the key States in Presidential elections.



DR. GALLUP

Most political observers had always considered California a strongly New Deal State in recent years, fairly safe for the Democrats. But a State-wide survey by the Institute reveals a Democratic defection in the Golden State of phenomenal proportions—so great that it is entirely possible that President Roosevelt will face a hard fight to carry the State at all next November, even though it voted for him two-to-one four years ago.

While the President is leading Wendell Willkie in popular strength throughout the State at present, his majority is 14 points below what it was in 1936 and 9 points below what it was in June, just before Willkie was nominated by the Republicans.

Thirty-seven staff interviewers for the Institute conducted the poll in California, asking a cross-section of voters the question: "If the Presidential election were held today, would you vote for Willkie or for Roosevelt?"

Those expressing a choice voted 54 per cent for Roosevelt, 46 per cent for Willkie. Approximately one voter in seven (14 per cent) said he was undecided at present.

The significance of this vote is apparent when it is compared to previous results in California.

Opinion as of Today

The poll in California reflects opinion only as of today, of course. Whether the Democratic defection there noted has extended throughout the rest of the Nation will be made clear next week as the Institute completes its first Nation-wide survey on the Willkie-Roosevelt race. Interviewing in the California poll, as well as in the remaining States, did not begin until after both Willkie and Roosevelt had been nominated by their respective parties.

Besides California, returns have been reported so far for Pennsylvania, showing 52 per cent for Willkie, 48 per cent for Roosevelt.

SUNDAY—The first complete State-by-State Gallup poll on the Willkie-Roosevelt race will be reported next Sunday. It will show the national popular vote for the two candidates, the popular vote in each State and the line-up of electoral votes as the campaign starts.

Signs Accumulate

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, July 30.—Reports from France, Germany, Italy and Spain tonight indicated Germany may be making final preparations for an attempt to invade Britain.

Italian fighting planes and German-trained Italian troops were reported massed alongside Nazi blitzkrieg forces.

Italian sources in Switzerland said plane load after plane load of parachute troops, veterans of Ethiopia and Spain, have flown across France to take-off bases facing the English Channel and North Sea.

To Emulate Caesar

Reports have been current in foreign diplomatic circles that Premier Mussolini specifically asked Adolf Hitler to let the Italians share in a direct invasion of the shores where Caesar's legions landed almost 2,000 years ago.

Hitler was said to have agreed—but to have limited Italy's part in invasion to "token" land and parachute forces, plus large squadrons for bombing and ferrying troops.

Garrison Reinforced

German and Italian travelers from Spain said the Nationalist government there appeared to be preparing to grab Gibraltar—a move which it long has been reported may coincide with a German attack on England, across the Channel.

These sources said troops in small armed boats carrying artillery were concentrated near La Linea, Spain, behind Gibraltar.

Reports from France said the Italians were concentrating bombing planes at their Sardinian bases for an air attack on Gibraltar—another move expected in a coordinated German attempt to invade Britain.

[International News Service said Madrid sources reported heavy reinforcements of Britain's Gibraltar garrison.]

Way West Guarded

Italian informants reported that the last of the Italian-made "pocket" submarines—about 36 feet long—had passed through the Brenner Pass in sections on railway flat cars. These little submarines are expected to be one of the main protecting arms of the expected German Channel attempt.

In Germany today it was stated that any speculation on the movements of Nazi troops in German-occupied parts of France would come under the head of military secrets.

SENATORS AS FATHERS

It is mildly astonishing, with the birthrate so low, to discover in this crisis that no fewer than 38 Senators list no children at all in their official biographies. This looks like race suicide in the high places and exceedingly bad politics, or at least like a degree of reticence strange and unbecoming to a United States Senator.

Harlan Miller

* * * *

But further research, as diligent as the heat will permit, reveals that 17 of these 38 Senators do have one or more children. Among these secretive gentlemen are several with four offspring; Smathers and Bailey with five each, King with six, and Slattery, of Illinois, the grand champion pappy of the Senate, with 11, but mum about it.

* * * *

This still leaves 21 Senators who acknowledge no progeny, and of these only seven are bachelors in good standing. It is amazing that an uxorious electorate, as devoted to crib and cradle, home and fireside as Americans are, would choose so many Senators utterly devoid of the philoprogenitive instinct.

* * * *

All told, the 96 Senators account for a total of 251 sons and daughters, or an average of only two and one-half children per Senator.

When I think of one of my wife's forebears who, in colonial days, begat 18 children and adopted 12 others, the contrast is painful and brings a blush of shame for the greatest deliberative body in the world.

"—secretive about children?

It's better at that than Vassar girls and Harvard men do, on the average. But it is not enough, according to the anthropologists, to assure the survival of the noble Senatorial line of 1940 much beyond the year 2000. Ultimate survival, they say, requires three children per family.

* * * *

For this possibly deplorable state of affairs no blame whatever attaches to a heroic little group of 18 Senators. These gallant, undaunted 16 have produced 101 children. Precisely one-sixth of the Senate, they are responsible for not far from half of its proud progeny.

* * * *

Here is the paternal roll of honor, which averages better than six children: Downey, McCarran, Frazier, Davis, Stewart, Smathers and Bailey, with five each: Townsend, Wheeler, Murray, King, Schwarz, with six each; Reed, of Kansas, and Brown, of Michigan, with seven; Ohio's dauntless Donahey, with ten, and the great Slattery.

(I hear Senator Smathers has just been blessed with a sixth, too.)

* * * *

Play a fanfare, too, for the ten Senators with four children each: Wiley, Cotton Ed Smith, Taft, Tobey, the handsome foe of the census men; Overton, Happy Chandler, Maloney, Adams, Glass and Byrd.

Oddly enough, only four or five of the 25 Senators with four or more children are loudly isolationist.

* * * *

Maybe they think the British navy is protecting their children.

Maybe not . . . The most popular or customary number of children in Senatorial families is three. There are 23 Senators with three apiece, or, as their constituents say, just a nice family.

"—champ daddies not isolationist"

Fifteen Senators have two children apiece, including Theodore (what-a-man) Bilbo. If you question them closely they'll probably tell you that two is enough to support on a Senator's salary. Two is the number for the modern, streamlined family, though some of these Senators are neither modern nor streamlined.

* * * *

Eleven Senators lavish their affections on only children. To be the only child of a Senator must be a rare experience. But daddy has his constituents to think about, too, and it isn't likely these 11 have been spoiled.

* * * *

Even in a Senator's family the wife presumably gets part of the credit for the number of children, whether 1 or 11 . . . I'm the last man to withhold any of the laurels that belong to the lady of the house.

* * * *

You've already observed, of course, that most of the Senators with big families are from more or less Middle Western or Western States. Ohio, mother of Presidents, is the champion uncle of Senatorial children, with Donahey and Taft totaling 14. Montana is a great State, too, with a pair of six-child Senators.

* * * *

After all this research, the mystery still remains: Why do 17 Senatorial fathers fail to list their children in their official biographies? A Senator's child deserves that much of a break . . . But there are 34 Senators who don't even list their wives—including, of course, the seven bachelors.

Incidentally, the 21 childless Senators could provide good homes (after suitable investigation, of course) for some of those British refugee children.

Farley to Remain Awhile in Cabinet

His Resignation May Be Delayed Late in Campaign

By Robert C. Albright

The Administration is exerting extraordinary efforts to induce Louis Johnson, forced out as Assistant Secretary of War, to accept the relatively monor post of administrative assistant to the President, it was learned last night.

Thomas G. Corcoran, special counsel in the RFC and one of the inner circle White House advisers, has flown to Bohemian Grove in California, where Johnson is vacationing, for that purpose.

Reports here are that Johnson has resisted all overtures. He is said to have been resentful first over his failure to receive appointment as Secretary of War after Harry Woodring reportedly was forced to resign because of his differences with the President over providing aid to the Allies.

Next, Johnson is said to have had assurance that his nomination for the Vice Presidency would encounter no White House opposition, only to see a boom started by some of his friends collapse when the President selected Secretary of Agriculture Wallace for the nomination.

Not "In a Hurry"

Johnson's resignation was called for and accepted last Thursday when newly appointed Secretary Henry L. Stimson asked that Judge Robert P. Patterson, a fellow Republican and judge of the Federal Circuit of Appeals in New York, be made his assistant.

After submitting his resignation Johnson left the Capital immediately for the West. Announcing the resignation, the White House said President Roosevelt had asked Johnson to accept the administrative assistant post to serve as the President's representative in the entire defense program.

Asked at his press conference yesterday if he had had any word from Johnson in reply, the President smiled as he remarked that people at Bohemian Grove are never in a hurry.

From other sources, however, it was learned that Corcoran already was in California, intending to try to persuade Johnson to rejoin the Administration.

Judge Patterson was confirmed by the Senate yesterday for the post given up by Johnson.

Farley's Resignation Delayed

Acceptance of the resignation of Postmaster General James A. Farley as a member of the Cabinet has been indefinitely held up, with the possibility that he may be kept on as Postmaster General until deep into the campaign, it also was learned yesterday.

New Deal leaders, unable to decide on a national chairman who can fill Farley's shoes, continued to look hopefully to "Genial Jim" for campaign aid.

Farley has resisted continuing pressure to remain on as national chairman after August 17, even though the President personally is said to have appealed to him at their White House conference late last week.

Seek to Offset Reports

But Farley has not insisted on immediately stepping out of the Cabinet, although his resignation is pending. Some influential members of the reorganized Democratic set-up feel Farley's continuance as Postmaster General for several weeks at least would offset reports of a sharp "break" and would retain the political appeal of his name and advice on the credit side of the campaign ledger.

Under that arrngement, the man chosen to succeed him as chairman of the Democratic National Committee would not automatically step into the post of Postmaster General. This might make the Democratic chairmanship less attractive to some of those interested.

Farley's contract to take over the New York Yankees is virtually consummated and friends said it is "too late" for him to reconsider his separation from the national committee even if he wished.

To Keep N. Y. Party Post

He has agreed to stay on as New York Democratic State chairman, and to cooperate in setting up the reorganized national committee before he steps out August 17. If some in the New Deal High Command have their way, some ties will be continued long after that date.

With Farley apparently bent on retiring as chairman, the three other men most prominently mentioned—Frank Walker, Senator Byrnes and Leo Crowley—have all expressed reluctance to serve.

A fourth being boosted in some quarters—Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt—it is believed would expect the Cabinet appointment as soon as he became national chairman.

As a special sub-committee of the Democratic National Committee waits on the President tomorrow to receive his views, increasing pressure is expected to be put on Senator Byrnes to take the chairmanship in addition to his Senate duties. This would be interpreted as a gesture to the South, which left Chicago empty-handed, and a reward to Byrnes, who floor-managed the third-term nomination.

"I hope that nobody suggests that the warm-hearted Alfred E. Smith, most distinguished liberal Governor that New York ever had, is one of those persons who is actuated by love of money rather than love of humanity."

"First Citizen" of New York

Saying that Smith was a man who "started from the sidewalks of New York," Willkie asserted that "as a matter of fact his liberal principles were those adopted by his two successors in the governorship), Franklin Roosevelt and Gov. Lehman. I think Gov. Smith is the first citizen of New York."

Seabury told Willkie his nomination "justifies the hope that under your Presidency order and equality of opportunity may supplant the present bureaucratic chaos which has paralyzed and demoralized industry.

"New Deal experiments designed to limit production and to substitute Governmental regimentation for individual and group initiative have revealed a succession of failures which have lowered the standard of living, increased the power of the Federal Government, impelling it along the way which leads to totalitarianism and left us with an unbalanced budget without substantially reducing the number of unemployed."

Smith Walks to Willkie

New York, July 30 (AP).—Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic Presidential candidate a dozen years ago, who took his first famous walk out of his party's convention in 1936, declared himself today for Wendell L. Willkie.

In a formal statement, the former Governor of New York declared that "in my opinion, the recent so-called Democratic convention in Chicago sounded the death knell of the Democratic Party."

As a result, he said, he and "millions of other genuine Democrats throughout the United States will continue to protect and defend the true Democratic principles and will in no way willingly or silently tolerate any foreign blocs, call them New Dealers or what not.

"In the forthcoming election we will march under the banner of Wendell L. Willkie, a life-long Democrat."

Dallas, Tex., July 30 (INS).—Former Democratic Congressman Joseph Weldon Bailey, jr., tonight became chairman of the Texas-for-Willkie Clubs. Bailey, son of the late Senator Bailey, declared in accepting the chairmanship:

"Willkie is as good a Democrat as any Democrat I have ever had an opportunity to vote for."

Toland to Bolt

Edmund M. Toland, for 11 months general counsel for the special House committee investigating the NLRB, announced last night that following another hearing by the committee tomorrow he would resign from his post, return to private law practice and work for election of Wendell Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee.

A Democrat, Toland was critical of President Roosevelt's failure to take any action on disclosures by the investigating committee. He said that in spite of the showing of "irregularities" in administration of the National Labor Relations Act justifying action by superiors of the board members, the President had shown no intention of taking any corrective steps.

"I believe with other Democrats, too," he said, "that Jim Farley got a dirty deal at the Democratic convention, and I can no longer tolerate the New Deal elements as standard bearers for the Democratic Party."

Toland said that at the hearing tomorrow the only witness would be J. Warren Madden, NLRB chairman. After he testifies Toland will place numerous documents in the record, and then end his service with the committee.

Pulp Shortage Or Price Rise Held Averted

Defense Board Assures Adequate Supplies, President Reports

Danger of any shortage or spiral price rise in paper pulp has been averted by action of the Defense Commission, President Roosevelt told his press conference yesterday.

With apparent satisfaction at an example of consumer protection accomplished by his seven-man advisory group, the President said the Defense Commission, in cooperation with the pulp industry, had been able to assure adquate supplies at a stabilized price.

Spot prices for paper and pulp have been rising in recent months, due primarily to fears of a shortage because of the elimination of Scandinavian imports, increased South American demand for American pulp, and the extensive uses of pulp in making explosives, the President reported.

The materials division under Edward R. Stettinius, jr., surveyed the industry's capacity to produce, and the price division under SEC Commissioner Leon Henderson canvassed the price situation, the President said.

Conferences between representatives of Stettinius and Henderson and 17 of the leading pulp and paper producers in the Nation lead to eight conclusions:

1. No actual shortage of pulp exists, with possible minor exceptions.
2. No immediate danger of a shortage is apparent.
3. French and Italian inability to use United States markets and buy American rayon pulp will cut down shipments to those countries.
4. Imports from Canada are expected to increase.
5. A striking spread was noted between spiraling spot prices and contract prices, an important element because 90 per cent of pulp is sold on contract.
6. The present spread between cost and contract prices appeared adequate to stimulate production.
7. Further price changes would result only from changes in basic costs, such as labor, taxes and raw materials.
8. Tonnage needed for national defense was not expected to divert substantial amounts of pulp from normal industry requirements.

Frank, Eicher Considered For Judgeships

Chairman Jerome Frank and Commissioner Edward C. Eicher of the Securities and Exchange Commission are in line for Federal judgeship appointments in the near future, The Post learned last night.

Chairman Frank is being considered for the New York Circuit Court post left vacant by appointment of Judge Robert Paul Patterson, Republican, to be Assistant Secretary of War, replacing Louis Johnson.

Commissioner Eicher, a well informed source said, conferred recently with Attorney General Robert H. Jackson regarding a post on the Federal bench.

Retirement Rumored

The two SEC commissioners are both top-ranking New Dealers. Judgship appointments would be for life, while SEC Commissioners are appointed for five years.

Chairman Frank's retirement from the SEC has been rumored frequently during the last year.

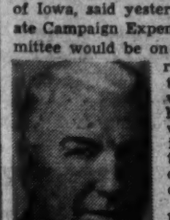
Frank was appointed to the SEC in December, 1937, and became its chairman when Justice William O. Douglas was promoted to the Supreme Court.

One of the original brain trusters, and author of a book, "Save America First," a plea for the preservation of capitalism, Frank joined the New Deal in 1933 as general counsel of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. He resigned in what was called the first New Deal "purge," the result of differences between Frank and George N. Peek, first AAA Administrator.

Eicher, a native of Iowa, was appointed to the SEC in November, 1938, after serving three terms in Congress.

Political Arena

Chairman Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, said yesterday the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee would be on the alert for reported "subterfuges" which he said he understood would be used in giving radio time in behalf of political candidates.



Gillette

"Information has come to the committee," he said at a press conference, "that elaborate plans are being developed to utilize the radio in the present campaign in the hopes of sponsors paying for the time without bringing the expenditures within the statutory campaign limitation.

"The suggestion takes the form of having commercial sponsors arrange for guest speakers to appear on programs. Then the guest speakers would make political speeches."

The candidates and sponsors were not identified by Gillette.

New York, July 30 (INS).—Former Representative John J. O'Connor, "purged" two years ago by President Roosevelt, announced today that he will be a candidate for the House of Representatives on both the Democratic and Republican tickets in the primaries this fall.

St. Paul, July 30 (AP).—Gov. Harold E. Stassen, keynoter at the Republican National Convention and chairman of the advisory committee of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee for President, filed today as a candidate for renomination.

Three others also have filed for the Republican nomination for the primary September 10. Former Gov. Hjalmar Petersen is among those seeking the Farmer-Labor nomination.

In a statement, Gov. Stassen declared his administration had "cleaned out widespread corruption and waste," "in a large measure ended violence, bitterness, strikes, lockouts and loss of wages and substituted peaceful settlements and steady wages," and "changed debts and deficits to a balanced budget."

New York, July 30 (INS).—President Roosevelt has slipped from a 9-to-5 favorite over Wendell Willkie to 7 to 5 and, in some cases, to even money in unusually heavy Wall Street betting on the outcome of November's Presidential balloting, it was reported today.

The total already wagered in the financial district is authoritatively estimated at more than $250,000.

Bulk of the bets already placed have been at 7 to 5, it was stated, but much Willkie money is said to be going begging.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., July 30 (AP).—Cyrus McCormick, Republican national committeeman for New Mexico, announced today his withdrawal as a primary candidate for Congress to devote his full time to the general election campaign.

Recruiter Here For Women Fliers

Chelle Janis Sees CAA Heads on Plans For Organization

The founder-president of the Women Flyers of America—an alert young woman in a crisp white suit and blue blouse—dropped into Washington yesterday to further plans for recruiting a nation-wide reserve corps of feminine aviators.

Miss Chelle Janis, of New York, came here primarily to confer with airport authorities and representatives of Civil Aeronautics Authority. The organizers whom she will appoint here soon will interview Washington girls with a hankering for flying and with the desire to "stand ready" if needed in the defense program.

But Miss Janis hadn't been in Washington long before two would-be fliers sought her in the headquarters at the Willard Hotel.

Myrl O. Rhine, 1717 R street northwest, a tall lively advertising employ, and Mary Jane Henricks, 1739 Potomac avenue southeast, demure, blonde plate printer's assistant at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, gave a hint of the varied types which Miss Janis has learned to expect.

"We have school teachers, women doctors, debutantes, secretaries, a fashion magazine editor and even two grandmothers who have enrolled in New York," Miss Janis said.

Leaders in the organization hope to enroll 500 Washington girls by September 1 and 5,000 over the Nation by the same time. Already 750 have signed up, although this is only the third city in which headquarters have been set up, since the organization was formed June 24.

In case of a national emergency, the corps could be available to replace men in flying duties behind the lines, thus freeing the men for active duty, she pointed out.

Under the plan, arrangements are made with airports and instructors for members to take the entire course leading to a private pilot's license for a special rate within range of girls with moderate salaries, she said.

Miss Janis said that six women had organized the "nonpolitical nonprofit-making corps' and added that it had no subsidy or commercial tie-up. A $5 annual membership fee and a small profit on optional equipment will be sufficient to keep the office running, she said.

With all her taste for flying, Miss Janis hasn't found time to win a pilot's license of her own. Several years ago she rode in planes between capitals of Europe. But she has had a busy career "as the first woman theater manager in New York," where she had the Ziegfeld Theater under her wing in recent years.

Miss Janis and Miss Genia Novak, executive vice president, came down by commercial plane from New York, and will be off again today to set up a fourth headquarters in Hartford, Conn.

Family Awaits Funds to Bury 3-Year-Old Girl Killed by Auto

Mother Will Learn Today Whether Welfare Agency Has Been Successful In Making Arrangements for Funeral

Three-year-old Winona O'Donald was fatally injured Monday when she was struck by a motor car near her home, 1606 Thirty-third street northwest.

Not until this morning will her mother, Mrs. Stephen O'Donald, learn from a member of the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare whether it has been possible to arrange for the child's burial. A friend of the family has offered a place in the cemetery lot, where his parents are buried, but the O'Donalds have no funds for the funeral.

Yesterday Mrs. O'Donald sat in the neat, little living room of the old Georgetown house where the family lives.

Miss Eliza de Saussure, social worker for St. John's Episcopal Church, whom Mrs. O'Donald regards as her best friend, called in the afternoon and was doing what she could to aid the family in its distress.

The mother rocked her only son, Charles, aged 4, who had his little sister by the hand when the car struck her.

"It is a wonder he escaped," she said. As the child climbed down from her lap and started for the door, she cried out:

"Now don't cross the street."

Edith, the eldest girl, aged 14, whom her parents were bringing home from Georgetown Hospital while little Winona was being carried in the emergency entrance of the institution, sat on a bench nearby, not yet fully recovered from the heat stroke from which she had been suffering.

"It seems almost cruel that Winona should have had to wait until she died to have a pair of shoes," said Mrs. O'Donald, her eyes brimming with tears. The Mothers' Club of the Georgetown Playground is going to buy her clothes. One of the women came this morning to ask the size of her shoes. She had not had a pair since Christmas."

Little Charles was barefoot. His next older sister, Nina Ruth, 6, wore a pair of tennis slippers. Agnes, 9, and Anna, 12, were at the home of a neighbor. The baby, Catherine, 18 months, was being cared for by her aunt, Mrs. Helen Shutt, of Capitol Heights, Md.

"She has three little ones herself," said Mrs. O'Donald. "Edith lived with her last winter and finished junior high school."

Tae father, a painter by trade, has been ill for months and unable to work. Monday, in addition to all else that happened, he received a letter from the Veterans' Administration, notifying him that, as his present illness was not incurred in nor aggravated by his service in the World War, he would not receive compensation as a result of it.

An inquest will be held today at 11 a. m. in the morgue to determine responsibility for the child's death.

Heat Kills Three, 18 Collapse

office, was the signal for the District Commissioners to stop work at the District Building at 1:30 p. m.

Other victims yesterday included Harry Prince, 48, of 1604 Thirty-third street northwest, and Byron Huie, 34, of Arlington, Treasury Department employe, who were treated at Emergency Hospital; Lawrence Baker, 36, of 1744 Columbia road northwest, Casualty Hospital, and Lester Wood, 1023 Thirty-ninth street northwest, and Ezra Lee, 30, of 1812 Cochrane street northeast, an employe of the District Refuse Department, Georgetown Hospital. Department, Georgetown Hospital; Carl Whiteson, 32, of 1408 Eighth street northwest, Garfield Hospital; Carrie Johnson, 38, colored, of 56 I street northeast, Gallinger Hospital.

Twelve additional heat sufferers were reported, but no record was keptof their names.

By 2 p. m. work was stopped in virtually every Federal office not air conditioned. An estimated 15,000 were freed from the desks in the Agricultural and Commerce Departments, parts of the Treasury Department and in the Weather Bureau.

Alarmed because last week's death total for the city was 91 higher than the week before and considerably above weekly totals for the month, Dr. George Ruhland, District health officer, directed Joseph B. Irvine, chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, to investigate the effect of heat on the rising mortality rate. Last week's death total was 220.

An increase in the mortality rate during the hot weather months is usual, though in the majority of cases heat is a contributing, rather than primary factor, Irvine said.

A night in which the temperature hovered in the 70's gave Washingtonians a comfortable sleep, but the soothing effect was quickly lost during the day when the mercury rose to 83 at 9 a. m. and jumped to 90 two hours lateer. Not until 7 p. m. did the temperature drop below 90, after rising to 95.7 at 3:20 p. m. The humidity—which is still around in excess—was recorded at 53 per cent at 7:30 p. m.

A respite may be in store for the city today in the way of showers, but these, if they show up, will be brief.

Two Killed In D. C. Area Air Accidents

One Electrocuted as Plane Fells Wire At Greenbelt Field

Two persons were killed yesterday in freak airplane accidents near Washington.

James A. Masters, 22, of Springfield, Ohio, was electrocuted after his plane struck a 4,000-volt wire at Schrom Field, Greenbelt, Md. He survived the crash, but was killed by the wire which fell on the grounded ship. A passenger, Victor R. Kile, 22, of 1409 G street northeast, escaped with a leg injury.

Charles M. Roberts, 26, of Huntington, W. Va., fell to his death when thrown from an open-cockpit naval plane while flying over Alexandria Airport, Hybla Valley, Va.

A telephone lineman, Masters had bought a light two-seater plane several days ago and had come here on a visit. He lost his way in a short hop from College Park to Capitol Airport.

Roberts, who had recently enlisted in the Navy, was hurled from the plane when it struck an air pocket at a height of 600 feet. Lieut. T. W. Wagner, the pilot, said that the student attempted to use his parachute, but that the altitude was too low for the 'chute to break the fall.

Trustees Named For Emmitsburg Railroad Assets

Frederick, Md., July 30 (AP).—Trustees for the portion of the Emmitsburg Railroad Co.'s assets covered by a $15,000 mortgage were appointed today by Judge Edward S. Delaplaine.

The court decree was signed after a petition was entered by the Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore, assignee of the mortgage. W. Clinton McSherry, Frederick attorney, and J. Crosson Cooper, of Baltimore, trust company counsel, were named trustees.

The trust company petition declared the mortgage was executed and delivered to the Sisters of Charity at St. Joseph's College November 2, 1931. It was assigned to the trust company July 11, 1939, and the total debt still owing as of today was placed at $14,938, including interest.

The mortgage is in default and long overdue, the petition said in suggesting the court fix an "upset price" at which the property could be sold. It also requested that proceeds from the sale be kept separate from receivership proceedings.

Bryan Heads Willkie Club In Arlington

Eugene Bryan, of Cherrydale, was elected president of Arlington County's first Willkie-for-President Club at a meeting last night in the Ashton Heights Clubhouse.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Colin MacPherson, of Woodlawn Village, vice president; Miss Anna Hedrick, of Glencarlyn, secretary, and William P. Ames, of Clarendon, treasurer.

The executive committee, consisting of a representative from each of the 11 voting precincts, will be named at a meeting August 5.

Mrs. J. P. Burke, Wife of Surgeon, Is Victim of Heat

Mrs. Ruth E. Burke, wife of Dr. John P. Burke, dental surgeon and former president of the District of Columbia Dental Society, died of a heart attack yesterday at their home, 5204 Western avenue, Chevy Chase, Md. Physicians said the attack evidently was brought on by the heat.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m., Friday, at St. Ann's Catholic Church, 4402 Wisconsin avenue northwest, with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Silver Spring Citizens Oppose Beer License

The Silver Spring (Md.) Citizens Association, through its executive board, yesterday opposed Angelo Scarla's application for a license to sell beer and wine in a dwelling at 8617 Colesville road, Silver Spring.

The action, taken at a meeting yesterday at the home of Stephen Tuhy, jr., association president, followed hearings on the application by the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board, at which some opposition was expressed.

Mularky Heads Defense Committee

Daniel P. Mularky was named chairman of a defense cooperative committee by the executive committee of the East Sligo Valley Citizens Association last night at the monthly meeting of the committee in the liquor control building in Silver Spring, Md.

Chosen to serve with Mularky were C. L. Bazzle, Eugene Van Vrancken, Ralph E. Torrey, and Ernest Woodchek. The committee is instructed to offer its services in any home defense plan projected by the Federal or State governments.

Leap Suicide Identified As Bride, 22

Certificates of suicide were issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night in the cases of two women who leaped to their deaths earlier in the day—one from Calvert Street Bridge and the other from a third floor window of her home.

The bridge victim was identified as Mrs. Ruth Arline Hart, 22-year-old bride of nine months. She left her home at 1321 Kenyon street northwest about 11:30 p. m. Monday and was seen to jump from the span by a taxi driver shortly after midnight.

Died in Hospital

Several hours later, Mrs. Antonia K. Barker, 33, of 1473 Irving street northwest, was found unconscious beneath her third floor apartment window. Police said two neckties were knotted around her neck. She died in Gallinger Hospital shortly after noon.

Mrs. Hart remained unidentified for several hours at the morgue before her identity was established by George H. Mitchell, of 2101 S street northwest, an attorney in the office of Martin T. Fisher, 1341 G street northwest, where she had been employed as a secretary for the past four years.

A ring on the woman's finger inscribed with the initials "C. W. H. to R. A. A., 10-27-39" led police to her husband, C. W. Hart, a clerk in the Charles Tompkins Construction Co.

Taxi Driver Sees Leap

Detective Sergt. Fred Rawlinson searched wedding license records around that date, located names corresponding to the initials and found Mrs. Hart's business address in the City Directory. Her husband, meanwhile, had notified police of his wife's disappearance, but knew nothing of her death until called by Rawlinson.

Mrs. Hart was seen to leap from the bridge by a taxi driver who jumped from his cab and attempted to prevent the tragedy. He reached her side just as she leaped, he told police.

Mrs. Barker was found by the apartment janitor, George D. Lewis. She was a stenographer in the Veterans' Administration until she resigned several months ago because of ill health, according to her husband, R. R. Barker, an employe of the Sanitary Grocery Co.

Housing Projects to Aid Defense

By Edward Ryan

A low-rent housing program to aid the District's defense employes was given finishing touches yesterday in a day-long conference of officials of the Alley Dwelling Authority and the United States Housing Authority.

John Ihlder, chairman of the Alley Dwelling Authority, said the two agencies had agreed to keep details of their new program secret until today, but he admitted that their plans call for at least two major projects:

A plan for protecting Washington apartment dwellers and other tenants against any large increases in the present rent levels in the District.

A new large-scale, low-rent housing project for Government workers to help relieve a housing shortage expected to develop with the influx of new employes to Washington.

Both proposals, officials indicated, have been submitted to the National Defense Commission's advisers for housing and price supervision.

Ihlder said that the detailed program would be outlined at a press conference arranged by the United States Housing Authority for 10 a. m. today.

Into their discussion of the projected District housing program, it was understood, went the results of a recent housing census, conducted by the Government personnel chiefs and the United Federal Workers. Employes in the Social Security Board, the Census Bureau, Agriculture Department and Railroad Retirement Board were quizzed on what their present housing facilities were, and what they would like to have.

Along with this survey, Alley Dwelling officials are reported to have conducted an intensive check-up into how far the private housing industry might be prepared to aid in relieving any local housing shortage.

Under a Naval Defense bill, Congress gave the Alley Dwelling Authority approval for handling defense housing projects in the District with funds to come from the USHA. The latter agency, meanwhile, has been seeking additional funds to build homes for defense workers in Washington and other cities.

President Roosevelt, with a single proclamation, has standardized the names of more than 200 homes for birds, bees, flowers, and animals, throughout the United States.

General rule for the change, it was revealed, was to convert the old names of bird and animal reservations—hit-or-miss descriptions like Hazy Island Reservation, Chinsegut Hill Migratory Bird Refuge, Turnbull Migratory Waterfowl refuge—into standard phrases like Chinsegut National Wildlife Refuge, Hazy Islands National Wildlife Refuge, Turnbull National Wildlife Refuge, and lots more.

Jobs: The Government's search for card punch operators has forced the Civil Service Commission to lower the standard experience requirement from two months to three weeks.

The operators are needed at the Civil Service Commission, Census Bureau, and other agencies. Officials warned, however, that the August 7 closing date for applications would not be extended.

A new examination for air-brush illustrator jobs in the Government, with four salary grades from $1,620 to $2,300 a year, was opened yesterday by the commission. Closing date for applications is August 24.

British Bomb Nazi Barges, Take-off Ports

raider included in the official tally was put out of action by the patrol vessel Guillemot, according to the admiralty, when a dive bomber made an unsuccessful attempt to sink it.

The auxiliary patrol yacht Gulzar, however, was sunk by a bomb. There was no loss of life.

The night raids, according to the air ministry, struck at oil refineries, shipping docks, air bases and highway and railroad communications in the Ruhr, Southwest Germany, Holland and Belgium.

In daylight raids yesterday R. A. F. bombers damaged a supply ship near Flushing and, at Emden and Hamburg, bombed barges that might be used to carry troops and supplies if Adolf Hitler attempts an invasion. Daylight raiders also kept up a ceaseless blasting of Ruhr oil refineries and enemy air force bases in Germany and German-occupied territories.

Raids Slacken

In comparison with German aerial attacks on Britain and its shipping around the coasts in recent days, today seemed quiet. However, from early morning until late tonight scattered raiders appeared over Scotland, England and Wales, dropping bombs that killed some civilians and injured others, demolished houses and damaged other property.

Late tonight a lone raider tried to damage shipping off a southeast coastal community, dropped three bombs, all of which missed, and then made off for home.

Gibraltar Raided

Algeciras, Spain (Wednesday), July 31 (AP).—Five persons were reported killed and 15 wounded in a raid by enemy bombers yesterday afternoon on Britain's Gibraltar fortress.

The Hotel Rock, where newly arrived R. A. F. pilots were quartered was hit by low-flying planes, presumably Italian. The pilots and a score of British fighter planes had arrived to bolster Gibraltar defenses.

Reports reaching here also said 22 were killed and 35 injured in the two Italian air raids July 26.

Contradict British Claims

Berlin, July 30 (AP).—The Nazi high command, denying British reports that 17 German warplanes were shot down in yesterday's raid on Dover, said today that the British lost 15 planes during the battle against only three German craft, and that four ships in the harbor were sunk.

On the east coast, said the high command, a 10,000-ton British cruiser and a merchant ship were sunk by bombers.

The Boersen Zeitung, in a tabulation of British shipping losses, credited Nazi sea and air raiders with destroying 257,000 tons of shipping in a single week.

Daily air raids on England's industrial sections, the newspaper added, not only are inflicting much damage on military objectives, but are spreading confusion among the British public and its leaders.

D. N. B., the official news agency, reported that the four ships sunk in the Dover raid had blocked the harbor and prevented other ships from entering or departing.

Night-flying British bombers again raided northern and western Germany, but the high command said they hit "exclusively nonmilitary objectives," including five apartment houses in Dusseldorf, in the industrial Ruhr, and two dwellings near Offenbach-on-Main.

Britain's Invasion Reported Near

tria, were closed today by the Germans, apparently to insure secrecy of troop movements through southern Germany in preparations for the offensive on England.

Even persons traveling on diplomatic passports now are required to pass only through St. Margarethen. Trains from Germany arriving at Basel station tonight carried only baggage and freight. No passengers were aboard.

Swiss sources pointed out that forcing all travelers into Germany to take "the long way around" through Austria would prevent outsiders from seeing the westward rush of men and war materials.

Despite German denials, the French government said flatly in a communique that rail traffic between occupied and unoccupied parts of France had been halted by German order.

The same order freed for military use the rolling stock required for mass movement of soldiers, guns and supplies to jump-off points along the occupied French Coast.

From Alsace in occupied France along the occupied French coast, came reports that German occupational troops hitherto on guard in the captured Maginot Line have moved out on marching orders to the west.

Diplomats and others who have passed through the German-occupied section of France, Belgium and the Netherlands reported that the Nazis have converted every available sports field and golf course into emergency fields for airplanes.

Britain's steady pounding of the regular airdromes was said to have made many of them useless.

Observers have told of seeing barges and shipping concentration for the push-off toward England ready for several weeks in Nazi-held harbors of the north, especially those opening onto the English Channel and the North Sea.

Even German-owned Rhine barges, which would be of little use in the choppy Channel waters except on the calmest days, have been towed down river to Low Country ports.

Gunmen Rob Bank Couriers Of $108,000

4 Bandits Escape With Loot as Train Blocks Police Car

By the Associated Press

Asbury Park, N. J., July 30.—Four bandits armed with shotguns robbed two bank messengers of $108,000 in cash today and escaped in an automobile after a mile-a-minute chase through the heart of this sea-coast resort.

Pursued for several blocks by Sergt. Vernon Bennett, of the Central Railroad of New Jersey police, the robbers made their getaway when a New York and Long Branch Railroad train, passing a grade crossing, forced Bennett to stop his car.

Police discounted reports that a woman was riding in the bandit machine.

The holdup occurred in front of the postoffice about 9:50 a. m. when the messengers, Joseph Sturm and Clarence Barton, stepped from their car to mail the fund, consigned from the Asbury Park National Bank & Trust Co. of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Three of the robbers poked shotguns at the messengers, took a revolver from Sturm and fled across the street with the cash to the car in which the fourth bandit was waiting.

James Forsythe, vice president and cashier of the bank, said the loss was covered by insurance.

Latvian Envoy Loses Citizenship In Riga Decree

Alfred Bilmanis, Latvian Minister to Washington who defied his new Communist government and refused to give up the legation here, has been deprived of his citizenship and property, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Riga, Latvia, yesterday.

Informed of the action by a Post reporter, Dr. Bilmanis declared: "It was to be expected from such a government. It is only the beginning."

Similarly punished was Karlis Zarins, minister to London.

The State Department still recognizes him as a fully accredited envoy. Bilmanis served as Latvian minister to Moscow from 1932 to 1935 and has been here since.

for ten years," said Bolles, "and I am convinced that there is no bar in the Constitution to suffrage or national representation providing that Congress retains exclusive control of District legislation."

Bolles pointed out that it would take "at least two or three years" for the States to ratify a Constitutional amendment even if Congress passes the Sumners resolution.

He explained that he is working on a bill to give the District national representation on the basis of a State but that he would not introduce it before next year.

23 Members Present

Representative Sumners said that he has no intention of amending his resolution so as to strike out a provision authorizing Congress to delegate self-government powers to the District. He declined, however, to comment on the question of whether local suffrage should be promoted simultaneously with national representation.

Passage of his resolution and ratification of the proposed Constitutional amendment by three-fourths of the States, Sumners pointed out, would not alter the status of the District until Congress acts.

Twenty-three of the 26 members of the Judiciary Committee were present at the executive session.

Before the committee met, officials of the Citizens Committee on National Representation presented a letter to Chairman Sumners reiterating the organization's views on national representation.

Meanwhile, Delegate King, of Honolulu urged Chairman Sumners to include Hawaii in any legislation to extend the franchise to the District.

"Hawaii and the other territories also are deprived of the franchise although they likewise are equally under the American flag," he said. Delegate Diamond, of Alaska, also stated that the ultimate goal of his territory is "full Statehood under the American flag."

Ford Foresees Greater Prosperity On 77th Birthday

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 30.—Henry Ford, who has sometimes been called the world's leading optimist as well as one of its outstanding mechanical geniuses, observed his seventy-seventh birthday anniversary today with a normal routine interrupted only long enough for him to reiterate his conviction that the future will bring a prosperity "greater than any we have known in the past."

"It will come," he said, "when we all realize that the things worth while and the things worth having are worth working for.

"The cost to society of a philosophy of indifference and carelessness has ben strikingly demonstrated in what has happened to certain European nations in the last few months. It is of the utmost importance to our own future that we avoid falling into that same attitude."

British Blockade All of Europe

Imports of Portugal, Spain to Be Limited To Their Own Needs

By the Associated Press

London, July 30.—A vast extension of the British blockade designed to close every possible avenue to Germany and Italy and especially to ring Spain and Portugal lest war supplies be transshipped there was announced in Commons today.

Hugh Dalton, minister of economic warfare, disclosed the inauguration of a new and sweeping policy under which:

1. Every ship in the Atlantic Ocean will be subject to seizure by the Royal Navy unless its master can produce a navicert—British-approved certificates of clearance—for its entire cargo.

2. Spanish and Portugese imports will be limited strictly to their own needs, supplies to be permitted to reach such neutrals in "imports adequate for domestic consumption, but not for re-export."

It was explained authoritatively that with the broadening of the navicert requirement, Britain hoped to "intimidate" a large number of ships which have been plying the Atlantic with cargoes certified only in part by British officials at their points of origin.

It was said in one reliable quarter that the United States was fully apprised of this move before it was ordered.

Despite all this unprecedented broadening of the blockade, Dalton declared Britain had signified a willingness to cooperate with the United States toward finding an outlet for American surplus commodities.

He indicated, too, that the British government felt some concern as to the effect of the widened blockade upon other neutrals—especially Spain.

After announcing that Britain shortly would produce some "ingenious" blockade provisions which would encourage her friends and discomfit her enemies, he said the government was sending an agent to Madrid to discuss Spain's oil needs.

He pointed out that United States oil shipments to Spain in the first six months of 1940 were substantially greater than in the first half of 1939.

Situation Called Obscure

Before the collpase of France, he said, oil from Spain could reach Germany only through the Mediterranean, where French naval patrols could be relied on to stop it.

Now, however, the situation is obscure, Dalton continued, and the agent would seek clarification of Spain's internal needs.

Later, a neutral diplomatic source predicted Spain would declare war on Britain "within a week or so" if the Royal Navy put an out-and-out blockade upon Spain.

An authoritative British source, however, insisted that extension of sea regulation would not constitute a blockade of Spain and that he believed it would "be understood" by the Spaniards.

U. S. Won't Redefine Combat Zones

President Roosevelt indicated yesterday Great Britain's blockade of all Europe will not cause an immediate redefinition of combat zones from which American ships are banned. The proscribed zones now include all European ports except those in Portugal and northern Spain.

Mr. Roosevelt said the United States would be extremely cautious about including these in the banned areas because they are this country's last means of commercial intercourse with all of Europe.

He declined to comment on the intensified British blockade, as such, until actual results become apparent. He said in this connection, however, that the situation had not changed since last Friday. At that time he said Portuguese and Spanish ports would be kept open for American ships as long as possible.

Committee Room Filled At Draft Bill Hearing

Associated Press Photos.

S. R. O.—The House Military Affairs Committee room (top) was filled to capacity yesterday at the hearing on the pending compulsory military training bill. Some found seats on file cabinets. Left—Msgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, told the committee that the Nation would be better served if "study and propaganda" had been devoted to efforts for voluntary enlistments. Right—Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, told the Senate Military Affairs Committee that "paper plans" for national defense were no longer enough. He urged part of the National Guard be called to active training immediately.

give specific indorsement to the Burke-Wadsworth bill, but he remarked that a whole lot of men without machines are not worth much and that a whole lot of machines without men are not worth much in the defense program.

Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, told reporters he had gained a "definite impression" that President Roosevelt favors enactment of the Burke-Wadsworth bill in its present form.

Clergymen Oppose Bill

Sheppard said his committee will resume consideration of the bill in executive session at 10:30 a. m. today. Meanwhile, the House Military Affairs Committee, which is still holding open hearings on the legislation, heard testimony yesterday from a dozen opponents of the bill, including several prominent clergymen.

Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, threatened to clear the packed committee room when spectators, many of them carrying "We Want Peace" placards, applauded a plea for the committee, "in heaven's name," to make public any secret information which might justify the draft bill. The appeal came from Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of the Riverside Baptist Church, of New York.

Other developments on the defense front yesterday included:

Simultaneous approval by the Senate and House of a bill to appropriate $25,000,000 for immediate expansion of TVA power facilities, to be used chiefly for manufacture of materials essential to the defense program.

Representatives of leading plane manufacturers conferred all day with William S. Knudsen, Defense Commission production chief, and Army and Navy officers on plant expansion plans. No decisions were announced.

The War Department disclosed that eight new National Guard observation squadrons will be organized at once, each to comprise 14 planes and 146 officers and men.

Approval by the Senate Military Affairs Committee of the President's plan for ordering the National Guard and Reservists into "intensive training" cleared the way for possible consideration of the plan on the Senate floor tomorrow, it was believed.

The committee modified the President's draft resolution in only one respect—to provide that the year of training, which is the maximum time for which the reserve soldiery may be ordered out, must consist of 12 successive months.

Gen. Marshall told the committee that "the security and safety of this country depend on our having an adequate number of men trained and there is no other way to do it except by this method, followed by some form of conscription."

"I don't think we can afford in any degree at this time to speculate on the security of this country."

Bridges Wants President's Views

The Senate committee's swift and complete approval of the Guard plan contrasted sharply with mounting opposition to the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill.

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, is understood to have insisted during the committee's stormy morning session that the group has a right to know President Roosevelt's view on "this vital issue." He was backed by Senators Gurney (Republican), of South Dakota, and Thomas (Republican), of Idaho.

The Republicans were promptly accused of "playing politics" by Senators Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, and Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Majority Leader Barkley said he saw no necessity for registering men over 45. The Burke-Wadsworth bill requires registration for defense duties of 42,000,000 men between the ages of 18 and 64, while men from 21 to 31 would be liable for immediate military training.

Chairman Sheppard said the Senate committee had agreed informally to consider a compromise suggestion by Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, ranking minority member, to limit registration to men from 21 to 45. Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, co-sponsor of the bill, said he has no objection to the proposal.

Bill Called Too Drastic

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, a World War infantry captain, said the Burke-Wadsworth bill is "too drastic" and announced his support for the proposal to recruit men on a one-year voluntary basis. This plan is backed by Senators Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana.

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, in a radio address last night, denounced the conscription bill as a step toward "the Hitler way" of preparing for war.

The Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, charged before the House Committee that the only demand for conscription comes from "high pressure propaganda emanating from the military profession."

Under the bill America would be trying "to fight totalitarianism with totalitarian methods," Msgr. George Barry O'Toole, of Catholic University, told the committee.

Navy to Escort Windsors Tomorrow

'Non-Convoy' Warships To Observe U. S. Law, Guard Against Raiders

By the Associated Press

London, July 30.—Skirting a United States law, guns of the British navy will guard the American Export liner Excalibur on its way to New York to insure the Duke and Duchess of Windsor—and the ship—against seizure by any enemy raider.

His Majesty's navy may, however, comply with the letter of the American law forbidding American ships to travel in belligerent convoy by keeping at a "non-convoy" distance, but close enough for action if need be.

The Excalibur will sail Thursday from Lisbon. The American Export Lines, in New York, confirmed that the Duke and Duchess had booked passage, to arrive in New York August 9.

En Route to Bahamas

The State Department said the Windsors would be granted visas for entry into the United States immediately upon application. Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, questioned as to the liability of German seizure of the Excalibur because of the Windsors' presence aboard, said that had not yet been considered.

A German raider might regard the Excalibur a prize of war as a carrier of a member of the British armed forces. The former British King holds an officer's commission. He and his American-born duchess will go to New York, en route to the Bahamas to his new post as governor and commander in chief.

The British frequently have removed Germans and Italians from Japanese and Italian ships. While the duke's case doesn't exactly parallel those, government sources said it was self-evident that such a prominent figure would be traveling at unusual risk.

Windsor Expresses "Pleasure"

Lisbon, July 30 (U.P.).—The Duke of Windsor said today "it is with pleasure that I go to Nassau, particularly since the Bahamas are the only part of the British Empire I never have visited."

U. S. Approves New Envoy From Petain Government

Haye, Due Next Month, Known in Versailles as '50 Per Cent American'

By the Associated Press

Vichy, July 30.—The United States Government has advised France it approves of the nomination of Senator Henry Haye as Ambassador to Washington, it was officially announced today.

Haye, Mayor of Versailles, will replace Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, recalled by the Petain government. The count succeeded Georges Bonnet in March, 1938.

Haye stuck to his post at Versailles when the Germans arrived.

The new Ambassador, known in his constituency as "a 50 per cent American," said he planned to leave for the United States late in August. The claim to half-Americanism is based on his many trips to the United States.

"I am sure America will understand France's situation at this sad moment," he said. "I have been associated with Americans long enough to feel I really know them and I am confident of their understanding."

Knows U. S. Well

Copyright by New York Times

Not a diplomat but a politician, Senator Haye's name has long been on the list for selection as Ambassador to the United States.

Genial, astute, and a successful politician, he made an excellent impression for the dignified way in which he met the Germans when they entered Versailles. He is in his early fifties.

He knows the United States well and during the World War as a member of the French military mission which instructed American troops in this country in the art of trench warfare. He continued that instruction among American troops later in France.

Count de Saint-Quentin conferred today with Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State. He is leaving soon for France but said he did not know what his future would be.

The concern of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, recently expressed, over whether this government should withdraw recognition from the Petain government and grant it to the De Gaulle committee Instead was not dissipated by the aceptance of Senator Haye, it was said in informed quarters at the State Department.

Morgenthau's interest revolves around the point of whether French credits, now "frozen" in this country, should be released.

Elsewhere it was pointed out that the acceptance of a change in ambassadors of a government with which we have consistently maintained diplomatic relations does not imply either recognition or non-recognition, but merely a continuation of the status quo. It was pointed out that withdrawal of recognition is not pre-requisite of release or retention of credits, and the case of Denmark was cited to this end. We have never withdrawn recognition from that "captive" government, but at the same time we do not give them any of their money.

Halifax Rebukes Japan 'Spy' Drive

Britain Rejects Tokyo Explanation Of Writer's Death

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, July 30.—Sterner language than the Japanese have heard from Britain for many years was used by Lord Halifax, the British foreign secretary, today to Mamoru Shigemitsu, the Japanese ambassador, in expressing the "serious view" which the British government took of the arrest of Britons in Japan on espionage charges.

In the House of Lords this afternoon Halifax revealed that two more arrests were believed to have been made, bringing the total to thirteen.

He also declared that the British government was "unable to accept this totally unwarranted assumption of guilt" which the Japanese made on Melville Cox, Reuter's Tokyo correspondent, who, according to the Japanese, committed suicide after arrest, "when he became aware of the fact that he could not escape conviction."

There are many indications that the Japanese may be badly mistaken if they think that because Britain "crawled" the last time she will crawl again, and there are hints that strong action will be taken unless satisfactory excuses and indemnities are forthcoming.

Drive Unsuccessful

The stiffer British attitude is the result of a number of factors. One is that conciliation has been conspicuously unsuccessful, the recent arrests being held a poor return for the British concession over the Burma road. Another is the growing suspicion that the Germans have had a hand in the latest Anglo-Japanese episode.

It is reported in authoritative quarters that at least one member of the German Gestapo, (State Police), holds a post in the Japanese ministry of the interior. This apparently was part of the agreement at the time of the anticomitern pact signed between Japan and Germany in 1936.

It is charged that this Gestapo agent—whose name is not revealed—exercises considerable influence on the internal affairs of Japan, particularly by pressure on the Japanese press and by supervision of films.

Halifax also dismissed disdainfully the Japanese charges that the arrested men had been part of a "British espionage network." "It is hardly necessary to state that there is no foundation whatever for this allegation," Halifax declared.

Others Face Arrest

Tokyo (Wednesday), July 31 (AP). Yakichiro Suma, Japanese foreign office spokesman, indicated at a press conference today that arrests on suspicion of espionage in Japan are continuing and may shortly include other foreign nationalities besides British.

He declined to disclose the number now in custody, but said, "I have reason to believe the number is increasing."

Suma declined to say whether any Japanese have been arrested, but noted that vernacular newspapers had reports to this effect.

Reliable sources saw the drive as a new spearhead in the Japanese campaign to effect the long sought "new order in east Asia" by elimination of foreign influence in the economic zone Japan has called her own.

The antiespionage campaign, in which a group of prominent Britons in Japan has been arrested, was discussed today by the United States and British Ambassadors to Tokyo, Joseph C. Grew and Sir Robert Leslie Craigie.

It was understood their conference covered the death of one of the arrested Britons, Melville Cox, veteran newspaperman.

Arrests Bring Unrest

Shanghai, July 30.—News of additional arrests on charges of espionage of many unnamed foreigners in Japan is arousing gravest misgivings among the foreign community of China particularly since all Japanese news agencies are now denouncing "foreigners" instead of only Britons as formerly.

Word has leaked out here that several of the largest Japanese news agencies offices in Shanghai late Tuesday received cabled orders from their head offices in Tokyo to stress particularly hereafter the anti-American features of all news items from China.

Rumania Threatens Force To 'Limit' Territorial Claims

Foreign Minister Warns Hungary, Bulgaria Will Not Be Permitted to Take Areas As Russia Occupied Bessarabia

By the Associated Press

Bucharest (Wednesday), July 31. Foreign Minister Manoilescu expressed today the Rumanian government's determination to keep Hungarian and Bulgarian territorial claims "within certain limits"—by the use of force if necessary.

In a declaration after a cabinet meeting which had discussed Adolf Hitler's talks with Manoilescue and Premier Gigurtu in Salzburg, the foreign minister said Rumania was determined not to permit further loss of this country's territory in the manner by which Soviet Russia took Bessarabia and northern Bucovina.

His remarks were interpreted in diplomatic quarters as meaning the government was determined to drive with Hungary and Bulgaria a hard bargain in the forthcoming negotiations with those countries—negotiations to be held at Hitler's orders.

Given Until September 15

It was reported Monday Germany had given Rumania until September 15 to settle by negotiation her territorial differences with Hungary and Bulgaria. If there was no agreement by that time, it was said, Germany and Italy planned to impose a settlement of their own.

Sources close to the government previously had indicated Rumania might try a compromise solution of Hungary's claims to Transylvania by offering to cede the three border cities of Satu-Mare, Oradea and Arad and arranging an exchange of populations in other districts.

Dispatches from Sofia said diplomatic circles there were pessimistic over Bulgaria's chances of regaining southern Dobruja from Rumania, despite teh reported Nazi demand for a quick settlement.

New Soviet Coup Seen

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, July 30.—The presence of a large number of Russian troops, tanks, airplanes and lorries in the recently occupied territories of northern Bucovina and Bessarabia is giving rise to belief there that the Soviet intends to make further incursions into Europe, according to a young Englishman who left those regions a few days ago after extensive travels following the Soviet occupation.

While it is impossible to give sources and names, it may be said that he occupied a semiofficial position. He asserted that tremendous quantities of equipment are evident in both of the new Soviet provinces as well as thousands of soldiers whose morale he described as "excellent."

He reports that many officers are convinced the Soviet will again expand westward, although they expect this will be effected without actual warfare.

British May Replace Home Meals With Communal Feeding to Save Food

By the Associated Press

London, July 30.—Home cooking soon may be forbidden in Britain, to be replaced by communal feeding for the populace—rich and poor alike sharing simple fare in government-controlled "mass-production" dining halls to strengthen the war effort by economizing on food supplies.

Government circles disclosed that the groundwork is being laid for possible introduction of such a far-reaching project, but said that details have not been worked out.

It is believed the program might include either the replacement of home kitchens by low-cost "assembly-line" cooking or that the government might underwrite restaurants and other establishments under direct government rule.

Labor quarters are described as especially enthusiastic about the proposal, since they see it as the solution to their protest against "luxury dining-out" by persons who can pay the price.

More Reprisal Arrests Made in Holland

Amsterdam (via Berlin) July 30 (AP).—More arrests have been made in the Netherlands in reprisal against alleged bad treatment of Germans in Holland's overseas possessions, it was announced officially today.

The numbers of Dutch arrested were not disclosed but it was said they were "some hundreds." They will be held in Germany.

These retaliatory measures will be repealed, it was said, when interned Germans in the Dutch possessions are released and allowed to work normally.

Butter Rationing Likely in Denmark

Copenhagen, July 30.—Denmark, formerly famous for its exports of butter and other agricultural products, now faces the possibility of the introduction of butter rationing. Minister of Commerce Christmas Moeller, in a radio talk on Monday, outlined the difficulties concerning employment, food and fuel which face Denmark in the coming winter. These difficulties far surpass those of last winter, many stocks being almost exhausted and overseas imports now impossible.

Bishops Indorse Prayer For Return of Sepulchre

Rome, July 30.—Two Italian bishops have enthusiastically indorsed a suggestion in the periodical Italia e Fede that the Italian people and clergy should pray and work for the return of the Holy Sepulchre to Italian hands, the Giornale d'Italian writes today. The titles of the Kings of Savoy contain, among other domains, those of "King of Sardinia, of Cyprus and of Jerusalem."

Vichy, France, July 30 (AP).—Pope Pius XII in a letter received by the church hierarchy expressed his confidence today that France "without waiting for conclusion of peace" will resume her march along the "road of honor and Christian justice."

First Victoria Crosses Awarded to Army Men

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, July 30.—The first awards in this war of the coveted Victoria Cross, Britain's highest military honor, to men of the British army, were announced today. Up to date the decoration has been given only to members of the navy and air force, in each case posthumously.

The award was made to Capt Harold Marcus Ervine-Andrews, of the East Lancashire Regiment, "for the most conspicuous gallantry on the night of May 31-June 1, near Dunkerque, and to Lance Corporal Harry Nicholls, of the Grenadier Guards, who continued to lead his men in action, although surrounded, and thus forced the Germans back across the River Scheldt.

Nicholls has been reported killed in action since his heroic stand.

The Wick of Freedom's Lamp

UNITY of spirit in a nation comes only from the devotion of its people to a fundamental ideal. Fortunately, America's fundamental ideal has always been freedom for the individual—the fullest measure of freedom consistent with proper respect for the rights and liberties of others.

Who stands for this freedom? All Americans do, all ages and all groups. But for 150 years of American history the very wick of the lamp of freedom has been the American farm.

America's farms have given to the nation far more than an abundance of food. Released from the soil by the use of machines, generation after generation of farm sons and daughters, imbued with the American ideal, have peopled our cities and created our industrial civilization.

This nation was established and built by farmers. Its basic social unit has always been the family on the family-size farm. So long as its foundation is the man who farms his acres, speaks his mind, helps his neighbor and prizes his freedom above his ease, America is secure at its base against disunion.

Because these things are true, the soundness and vitality of the family farm are essential to America. Sometimes we are told that it is endangered, that it is unable to compete against larger farms and large-scale methods.

Fortunately, that is not true. Today the number of American farms is at an all-time high and the overwhelming majority of them are one-family farms, operated by the members of the family.

Within recent years the farm equipment industry has produced mechanized equipment especially for the smaller farm—low-cost small tractors and a full line of implements for use with them. Now the little tractors are humming on thousands of American farms. Each passing day sees more of them in use. The small tractor is making itself as essential to American farming as the light truck is to American business transportation.

The progress of mechanization has strengthened the position of the American family farm and all that it stands for. Enlightened agriculture remains the strong and enduring social foundation of America.

We are proud that this is true, proud that the industry of which this Company is a part has helped to make it true.

British Expect To Counteract Torpedo Boats

Antidote to Nazis' Craft May Be Already Found, Says Officer

By the Associated Press.

London, July 30.—An effective antidote to the swift motor torpedo boats which Germany is using against British shipping will be found and "we may already have found it," a British naval officer declared today.

The boats constitute a "menace" with a high nuisance value, the officer said, but asserted that the Germans must have been disappointed with the results achieved.

Just what the reported antidote is, he did not disclose.

The officer said the German boats ranged from 90 to 130 feet in length and weighed from 50 to 90 tons.

Can Do 40 Knots

They have a speed of 30 to 40 knots, he said, and a "healthy" endurance, which, he estimated, averaged about 600 miles.

In addition to torpedoes they carry heavy automatic guns probably firing a 1½-inch shell, the officer reported.

Effective use of the craft, which Britain has dubbed "E-boats" ("E" standing for enemy) to distinguish them from U-boats, probably will be limited by the weather to the period between April and October, the officer said, although under favorable circumstances they might operate usefully even in winter.

Although the boats could be based anywhere from Bordeaux to Narvik, Norway, the officers said, Germany probably would use bases on the French Channel coast because they are nearer objectives.

Main Tasks of oBats

The officer listed these main tasks on which the "E-boats" have been used to date:

1. Mine laying last spring.
2. Antisubmarine work in the Skaggerak and off the Dutch and Norwegian coasts.
3. Dispatch and escort work in the Norwegian campaign.
4. Attacks on small British naval craft and the numerous auxiliaries used to remove British troops from Dunkerque.
5. More recently attacks on British convoys, especially at night. The latter attacks have earned the boats the nickname of "nighthawks."

Use Smoke Cleverly

Not knowing where or when the speedboat fleets might strike next, the British counterforce has to be much more numerous to be effective. The "E-boats" have the advantage of a low silhouette and virtual invisibility under some conditions.

The Germans also are making clever use of smoke—in puffs much smaller than the ordinary smoke screen—in order to conceal their presence before attacking, or as an aid in escape.

Russia Protests U. S. Freezing Assets of 3 Baltic States

By International News Service

Russia has lodged the first direct challenge entered by any government against the Roosevelt policy of freezing assets of nations whose sovereignty the Administration considers impaired or lost by conquest or political duress.

Within a few days after the Treasury had ordered an inventory and impounding of the Lithuanian, Latvian and Estonian assets here, it was learned last night, the Soviet formally protested the order as contrary to international law.

The three Baltic states had then just completed so-called "plebiscites" at which an asserted plurality had voted into office parliamentary candidates pledged to petition for entrance into the Soviet Union. Soviet troops allegedly policed the polls, and there were no opposition candidates in the field. The Soviet Parliament is slated to grant the petitions today or tomorrow.

Usually reliable diplomatic quarters said the protest had been handed to the American charge d'affaires in Moscow and cabled here by him.

In it, Russia reportedly contended the Baltic republics had voted to change their form of government at a free election and argued that the freezing order constituted an unwarranted interference with the decision of the majority in those states.

An indirect but blistering answer, diplomats pointed out, was set forth July 23 by Acting Secretary Sumner Welles who denounced the impended annexations as "deliberate annihilation" whose validity this Government would refuse to accept.

The United States, he added, will continue to regard Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia as sovereign, independent governments, temporarily under duress.

"We will soon have storm troopers in America . . . we shall have men whom degenerate Yankeedom will not be able to challenge."
—ADOLF HITLER

BETWEEN US AND HITLER STANDS THE BRITISH FLEET!

First, Europe . . . then America. So says Adolf Hitler!

He has promised his followers—"It will be a simple matter for me to produce unrest and revolt in the United States so that these gentry will have their hands full with their own affairs. . . . We shall soon have storm troopers in America . . . we shall have men whom degenerate Yankeedom will not be able to challenge."

Hitler has not won world domination yet. The Nazis and Fascists are still blockaded by the British fleet.

The British Isles still stand as a fortress of freedom, stopping the international gangsters from reaching the loot across the Atlantic Ocean.

The whole British nation is fighting. Their people will go on fighting as long as they have anything to fight with.

We can supply them with material that they desperately need to continue the battle. We must do this as the first measure of our own self defense.

● President Roosevelt has said: "We will extend to the opponents of force the material resources of this nation and, at the same time, we will harness and speed up the use of those resources in order that we ourselves in the Americas may have equipment and training equal to any emergency and every defense."

● Wendell Willkie has said: "On behalf of our peace and security and our own spiritual values, we should give the democracies such assistance as we can, short of war."

The statements of these two leaders are supported by the overwhelming majority of the American people.

What are we waiting for?

It is obvious to naval experts that Britain's most vital need now is for destroyers. Losses of destroyers have been heavy—ships actually sunk and more ships put out of commission at least temporarily. Furthermore, the British destroyer fleet must now do the heavy duty in the Mediterranean formerly done by the French.

Destroyers convoy Britain's food and supplies through the submarine zones. Destroyers patrol the perilous, narrow waters between England and the Continent, and are thus the first line of defense against invasion.

We have 162 over-age destroyers, most of which have lately been recommissioned. We could easily spare sixty of these.

In the interests of our own defense—for the future security of our country, our homes, our lives—we should and can and must make available to the British navy the needed destroyers.

And—in the name of all humanity—we should find a way to use our own ships to aid in the merciful evacuation of children from the British Isles.

All forms of aid for Britain—even the humane activities of the American Red Cross—are being sabotaged by the Fifth Columnists. But nothing can withstand the massed force of the will of the American people.

Let our public opinion be expressed—loudly—NOW!

Let it be converted by our government into positive action!

Write or telegraph your President—your Senators—your Congressmen—all the candidates for all public offices—that you want the U. S. to sell over-age destroyers and give other material aid to Britain—and give it immediately—before it is forever too late.

HITLER'S DREAM OF A WORLD UNDER NAZI RULE CAN NOT BE REALIZED AS LONG AS BRITAIN HOLDS OUT!

OUR TWO-OCEAN PROTECTION . . . TODAY

Think where we'd be if the British fleet fell to the Dictators and was used AGAINST us

If Hitler captures England the dictators and Japan would have 8 times the shipbuilding capacity of the United States.

Ships And Men

Among the many somewhat lyrical statements made when the new liner America first entered its home port of New York, a passing observation by Joseph H. Curran, head of the National Maritime Union, stands out for its real importance.

Mr. Curran, taking cognizance of complaints which truly vicious weather had elicited from members of the crew, observed that certain minor changes in their accommodations would be discussed with the United States Lines by the union.

"But," he added, "don't misunderstand me. This is the finest crew accommodation ever built in an American ship."

The America, one of the most graceful and beautiful steamers under any flag, is commonly regarded as emblematic of national desire to regain the maritime supremacy so ably held by this country in the days of the old clippers. The America is proof positive that our shipyards can turn out the vessels necessary to achieve that aim. But whether we have the willing, competent and disciplined seamen, without which the finest ship is merely a hulk, is yet to be demonstrated.

Often it has been said that in the fundamental attributes of seamanship American sailors, because of lack of discipline, are inferior to the English, German or Japanese. And Mr. Curran's union has been accused of fostering an insubordinate and grumbling spirit which confirms that pessimistic view.

It is, therefore, the more encouraging to hear his indorsement of the America as an ideal ship for crew as well as for passengers. This implies that satisfaction on this score will mean a stronger union effort to develop the type of merchant seamen we must have to attain the goal toward which the beautiful bow of the America is pointing.

Third-Term Airing

Senator Van Nuys has adequately explained the forthcoming Senate committee hearings on the third-term issue by linking that project with the Chicago convention. Nothing happened in the Windy City, he says to change his conviction that "a third term is violative of American traditions and a mistake." So Mr. Van Nuys intends to help Senator Burke explore the issue through public hearings.

There was no opportunity at Chicago to discuss the advisability or implications of abandoning the two-term tradition. The delegates were lined up for President Roosevelt and cast their votes for him as the man most capable of leading the Democratic Party to victory once more. The long-standing policy of that party to deny any man more than two terms in the White House went into discard without so much as a debate upon its merits.

A number of Jeffersonian Democrats were so perturbed by this event that they have pledged their support to Republican Candidate Willkie. Senator Van Nuys does not propose to take that course. He will continue to campaign within the Democratic Party, but only for the Indiana State ticket. And in the meantime, he proposes to give the third-term issue the airing it did not get at Chicago.

In theory the hearings will be centered upon Senator Burke's proposed amendment to the Constitution limiting any President's tenure of office to one term of six years. Actually they will become a forum on the third term. While witnesses for and against the proposed amendment will be heard, there can be no doubt that the general effect will be an outpouring of hostility toward a third term for Mr. Roosevelt.

In effect, therefore, the hearings are likely to be more a part of the Presidential campaign than of the legislative process. It is obvious that no agreement upon such a constitutional amendment can be reached when limitation of the President's tenure is an issue between the two major parties. No doubt the Burke committee will bring forth both valuable and interesting data that will serve the cause of general enlightenment. But the chief use to which this information will be put will be political.

Many will regret this political diversion during a session devoted largely to national defense. But the Senate has few scruples about playing politics in a general election year. The anti-third-term resolution directed against President Coolidge was a much wider departure from the legislative function than the Burke committee hearings are likely to be. Certainly the sincerity of Senators Burke and Van Nuys in officially airing this issue is not open to question, even though the effect may be to boost the stock of Wendell Willkie.

Agreement At Havana

Of the three agreements concluded at the Havana conference, by far the most important is that which provides for a collective American trusteeship over European possessions in this hemisphere, in the event that their status as dependencies of democratic nations is affected by the outcome of the present war.

This agreement is important—and far-reaching in its implications—for three separate reasons. The first of these is the manner in which it enlarges and modifies the scope of the Monroe Doctrine.

That cornerstone of American foreign policy has heretofore been essentially unilateral. That is to say, it was promulgated and has been made effective by the United States alone, without regard to the policies of the various Latin-American republics.

Broadly speaking, we have heretofore maintained that we would regard any further attempt by European powers "to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety." We have always hoped that other American republics would take the same attitude. But whether they approved or not in no way affected the position of the United States. The Monroe Doctrine was a policy of self-defense, its operation not contingent upon the cooperation of our neighbors.

The development of Pan-American unity has for some years tended to broaden this original conception of the Monroe Doctrine, and to make it a joint rather than an individual undertaking. But until the present Havana conference it could not be said that the unilateral doctrine had become multilateral. It does so with the signing of the convention which develops into a matter of continental concern those contingencies which President Monroe had defined as "dangerous to our peace and safety."

This aspect of the major convention approved at Havana would of itself make this draft treaty a matter of great historic importance. But beyond that the new convention provides for the creation of permanent machinery to uphold and support the enlargement given to the Monroe Doctrine.

This is done on the principle, firmly and forcefully asserted, that the American republics are "an international community which acts integrally and forcefully." This "community" it is further argued "has the international juridical capacity to act" in matters affecting continental "unity and security."

As has already been observed in these columns, the enunciation of this principle of international unity, together with measures to make that unity effective, is equivalent to the establishment of an American League of Nations. It is immaterial that the Administration is not asserting that this development is its purpose. Deeds are more important than words.

And the deeds at Havana clearly point to the quiet establishment of a league which will be less ambitious, but may also have more of the characteristics of a superstate, than the ill-fated Geneva organization.

The third significant aspect of the collective trusteeship convention is found in the accord which it has brought between the viewpoints of the United States and of the Argentine. To have reconciled these different viewpoints, representing fundamental divergencies of national interest, is a great tribute to the diplomatic skill of Secretary Hull. The magnitude of his accomplishment is only emphasized by the importance of the issue on which Argentine agreement was finally secured.

It is true that the Agentine delegation has taken occasion to state that signature of the convention at Havana will not necessarily commit the government in Buenos Aires. But, as a matter of fact, that is only stating the obvious. The same condition applies for the United States. None knows better than Secretary Hull that his signature on this treaty will not bind this country until Senate ratification has given it validity as a governmental action.

The Argentine delegation, it seems, was not so much loath to sign the collective trusteeship convention as it was eager to emphasize the democratic character of its government. Some of the envoys at Havana were able to commit their semitotalitarian countries by their own personal actions. That does not apply for the Argentine and, by the same token, it does not apply for the United States.

This will be realized more fully when the Senate opens debate on whether or not the treaties we have sponsored at Havana should be ratified. Immediate action is not to be expected, and in some important respects Administration policy can follow the lines laid down without Senate approval.

But the latter is nonetheless essential and the treaties should, from this moment, be securing the close Senatorial examination to which their vast potential importance entitles them.

Essential To Defense

The National Guard is part of what the Army calls our Initial Protective Force. Along with the Regular Army, it is expected to defend the country, in the event of a sudden attack, during that period necessary to train and equip a large armed force. It is a serious reflection upon our national defense policy that the Guard is not now ready to undertake this service.

Chairman Sheppard of the Senate Military Affairs Committee is entirely logical, therefore, in giving President Roosevelt's request for authority to call out the National Guard precedence over the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill. Our first need is for a highly trained contingent that can act immediately when and if any threat is directed against the United States. Under existing circumstances fairness to the Guard, as well as to the country, demands that these citizen soldiers be fully trained to meet any prossible assignment.

The National Guard has been severely handicapped in the past by lack of modern weapons and other necessary equipment. It is far from being prepared, in point of either training or supplies, to go into action on the battlefield, if that necessity should arise. Completion of its training appears to be one of the most urgent steps in the entire defense program.

If Congress authorizes the conscription of men for military and naval service, training of the new recruits will doubtless require the services of many National Guardsmen. Even if the Burke-Wadsworth bill should fail, the task of instructing a large number of volunteers would doubtless throw a heavier responsibility upon the Guard. This situation alone would probably justify mobilization of the guardsmen for 12 months of service.

But the demand for more military instructors merely supplements the chief consideration—that the Guard urgently needs more intensive training to prepare it for active military service. This point will not need to be emphasized in a Congress that has already proved its determination to adopt every measure which can be proved necessary for effective national defense.

Washington's Loss

In view of the recent revolutionary political reorientation in France it is inevitable that there should be speculation concerning the recall of Count Rene de Saint-Quentin as Ambassador to the United States. Nor has the Ambassador discouraged speculation in letting it be understood that he neither resigned nor asked to be recalled. But, quite aside from any possible political significance, there is deep regret here at Count Saint-Quentin's impending departure. Although it is only two-and-a-half years since he arrived here, this has been time enough to earn the French Ambassador universal respect and friendships in much wider American circles than those of official Washington. His success is in large part due to a personality in which charm, intelligence, dignity and simple friendliness are blended in unusually attractive proportions.

The job, certainly, has been no sinecure. The Ambassador's early tenure of office here was punctuated by the now historic succession of crises which led to the great and catastrophic events of August, 1939. Throughout these difficult months, and throughout the last tragic weeks of the Reynaud government, Count Saint-Quentin served his country here with unfailing loyalty, and with a devotion to duty which must have increased the constant and dreadful strain under which he and his staff have labored.

Whatever mistakes history may one day lay to the door of the ill-fated Daladier ministry it is certain that the appointment of Count Saint-Quentin to Washington will not be numbered among them.

Laughing Hyena?

The University of California has announced the first discovery of a hyena fossil in the United States. With some reservations, Americans may be proud to add this creature to the roster of our indigenous beasts. The hyena is infamous for his cowardice and underhand ferocity, it is true, but he has at least one admirable characteristic.

The question will arise, of course, whether the specimen found by California and Texas paleontologists was a native American. If not, what moved him to wander so far from his eastern hyenic homeland? Was he, perhaps, an outcast because of his principles? That is a hypothesis worth arguing. But it is easier to picture this lone hyena venturing to a distant, free land where he might with abandon exercise his peculiar propensity.

In other words, maybe he was looking for a laugh. Let us hope he did not die in despair.

Democracy Vs. Monarchy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Otto, erstwhile claimant to the nonexistent throne of Austria, said that "democracy and monarchy go hand in hand," which indicates that some of the crop of former royalty we are getting at a surprising clip may intend to use this country as a sounding board or rendezvous for plotting returns to worn-out thrones when, as, and if the Napoleons of this day meet their Waterloos.

That former kings, empresses, princelings and other remnants of royalty find this country a haven of peace and refuge from their broken-down order in Europe is strangely paradoxical. An unusual twist of fate, it is, indeed, which brings a whole cluster of Hapsburgs to the "land of the free and the home of the brave," which was held in such contempt by Metternich.

It is, of course, well known that most Americans have no illusions about monarchy. They dislike it for what it stands for. Of course there is a handful of Americans who like to bask in the light of royalty, but they do not belong to the common people.

Notwithstanding the fact that some royalty has "held over," their existence does not mean that monarchy and democracy are synonymous; the evidence points to the contrary. It is certainly to be doubted that the advance forces of democracy in Vienna—the industrial workers—much as they dislike Hitler, want a Hapsburg back when, as, and if they get rid of the man who has annexed them to his dictatorship.

Our American political democracy permits political outcasts—whether they be kings or rebels against kings—to find a safe harbor here from the bullets, bombs and perhaps the vengeance of outraged peoples. But in return for sanctuary, they should expand no plots on American soil. Moreover, they should study American history and learn, if they haven't already learned it, that the kind of democracy Americans want has nothing in common with monarchy from which most of our immigrant forebears fled.

"Conscientious Objectors"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Please permit me to express my appreciation and interest in your editorial, "Conscientious Objectors." It seems to me that if all the "men of good will" could get together in the world, there would be a powerful force for peace and final elimination of war.

If, when Japan first started her war against China, the men of good will could have been in power and prevented shipment to Japan of oil and iron ore, etc., this present awful descent into the abyss might have been prevented. Who knows? At least, it would have been an example.

Now when it is too late we are putting an embargo on these very shipments. As a pianist and teacher, I have little if any power in this age to prevent things of this kind. I, of course, would want to help the country if invaded or if in danger of such invasion, but not in the way of carrying a rifle or digging trenches.

When a man spends nearly a lifetime getting and perfecting the technic necessary to play the big compositions of the master musicians one cannot blame him if he would refuse to do manual work that even for six months would ruin him for life. Could not something be said for the man who thus acquires unusual skill in an art or profession? Scores of such examples will come to your mind without any explanation from me. One might say this is where personal selfishness comes in, but not when one believes that art and music are the supreme heritage of the human race and that they must be kept alive.

Probably in our deep heart we all unconsciously wish for brotherhood, not realizing that the race can be improved only by the individual himself making the real effort and thus in time leavening the whole. I am sure it is heartening to many to realize that men in your position are sometimes unafraid to speak the truth, as Emerson would say, "the dear truth" which is working, if men would only believe, for all mankind. WELDON CARTER.
Washington, July 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial in The Post of July 29 regarding "Conscientious Objectors" would be fine if all those claiming exemption based their scruples upon religious belief or simply upon humanitarian considerations.

That other reasons exist for objection I merely point to the groups raising the question and securing broader exemptions in the bill reported by the Senate Military Affairs Committee. News items of July 25 state that Howard K. Beall, of the American Civil Liberties Union; Benjamin C. Marsh, of People's Lobby; a representative of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, and possibly others of allied groups were heard against military conscription. The National Council for the Prevention of War has likewise come out against it.

If anyone will take the trouble to examine the literature put out by these groups he will discover that they all have been advocating socialism, a philosophy inimical to our form of Government, using such grandiose phrases as "social ownership through democratic control," "production for use and not for profit," planks in the Socialist platform. These phrases, defined, mean state ownership — the corporate state, not representative Government, with checks and balances, as provided under the Constitution.

The conclusion is obvious. These groups want enlargement of the definition of "conscientious objectors" and are against military conscription because they have no desire or interest in fighting to preserve that which they are working to change or to overthrow. To assign such objectors to "noncombatant service" or to work of "national importance under civilian direction" is to put civilians in noncombatant national defense positions where they have no intention of supporting soldiers in the field.

There has always been a question in my mind, too, whether the "conscientious objector" on religious and humanitarian grounds wasn't more concerned with the selfish purpose of saving his own soul at the expense of his brother than in working for the general good of mankind. Granted that the idealistic millennium presents no cause for war, war will not cease until men are better individually and collectively. At present it is still necessary, in order to preserve order, to sacrifice some our individual desires. Until men are better collectively it seems that men are faced with the necessity of choosing the lesser of two evils. MARIAN MORRIS.

My hearty appreciation and gratitude for your editorial in The Post of July 29 on "Conscientious Objectors." It is penetrating and fair and truly civilized. It can do only good to the cause of true United States preparedness.

Who Are The Refugees?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I read the daily newspapers in the same manner as most people—the comics, the sports, and then maybe the news. Yet one fact has struck me as very significant and that is the subject of refugees, especially children.

Almost daily there are pictures and news items concerning families coming to the United States to escape European blood-letting. But who are these families?

Well to start with there are the royal families; and then the bankinghouse families; and, of course, the families of large financial and industrial magnates.

But how about the poorer groups and their children? How about the ones who have no money nor influential friends and relatives to aid them in getting here?

These are the ones (the poorer groups) who have the skill, the knowledge, and the desire to contribute to America. I say let's have refugees and let's help others, but let's not make it merely a mercenary matter; we want the poor—not only the wealthy or the nobility with their parasitic notions. J. A. P.

Food For Europe

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Under the repeatedly stated and apparently generally approved policy of "all possible material aid to Great Britain short of war," we are selling to Great Britain, for cash on delivery in the United States, such materials as Great Britain will pay for and carry away in her own ships. Thereby we risk nothing and profit much.

Can it be possible that the United States Government is now seriously proposing to give, and even deliver free, $50,000,000 worth of food and other supplies to those parts of Europe now controlled by Hitler, against whom one of Great Britain's most potent weapons is starvation? Every sensible person will realize that these supplies will inevitably help Hitler directly or indirectly.

Are we willing to put ourselves in the position of asking Great Britain to help us comfort her enemies by allowing passage of such supplies through her blockade? This is emotionalism disguised as humanitarianism.

The League And I. L. O.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

After visiting the League of Nations at Geneva at the time of the Coolidge-called Conference on the Limitations of Naval Armaments and the International Labor Office, I urged upon Edward A. Filene that a change in organization of the League in the direction of that of the International Labor Office be worked for.

Could not that be brought about at Princeton? It might influence the Pan-American Conference not to depend too much upon the respective foreign offices and to build up agencies of Western Hemisphere cooperation. Some of the arguments for "Union Now" would apply.

At Geneva in 1927 the foreign offices brought and took away again their own efforts. The I. L. O. men were there all the time, or within reach. In the case of the League there was not time and opportunity enough for collaboration, it seemed to me. BURDETTE G. LEWIS.

The Little Man In The Brown Duster

AN ALOOF, middle-aged little man in a brown duster entered the Louvre one sunny day last June.

He was not alone, though he seemed so. Several impressive-looking gentlemen accompanied him. They were in uniform. They were generals and high officials in the little man's conquering army.

They were, also, self-conscious and kept punctiliously a step behind the brown-clad little figure, stopping when he stopped, admiring when he admired.

But if the generals glanced quite as often at their shiny boots as at the many objets d'art in the long, dim galleries, there was no mistaking the interest of the little man. His eyes caressed the cold, perfect marbles and grew dark with appreciation of the beauty of color, texture, form that met them here.

Sometimes he would call this or that to their notice and the generals would come quickly to attention, and even more quickly to utter agreement. "Ja, ja, Herr Fuehrer. Sehr schoen—wunderschoen!"

But mostly the little man was silent. He was experiencing the fulfillment of a dream. This was really no novelty to him—so many of his dreams had come true—but it was, after all, one of his earliest dreams—and one of his dearest.

We who have visited Paris quite as a matter of course and wandered through the Louvre, exclaiming and admiring—also, quite as a matter of course—may have some difficulty in understanding the little man's terrible interest and delight.

For he had waited a long time for this day. Years back, in a little town on the Austrian border, he had thought of Paris and her priceless art treasures. As he sat by the table in his father's humble home, painting and drawing, he had dreamed of the day when somehow, some way, he should find himself walking through the Tuilleries Gardens and into the Louvre. Vienna he would visit, of course, but Paris—that was his goal—his dream.

But so many things happened to divert him. The most important was a war. The War of 1914. The little man, consumed with patriotism, joined a Bavarian regiment and marched off to war with thousands of others.

It was exhausting business—this war—and in the end, nothing, in fact, less than nothing had been accomplished. A traitorous revolution had engulfed the little man's Fatherland on the eve of victory (or on the eve of defeat—the little man and the history books do not agree on this point, nor, in fact, on many other points).

To the little soldier, gassed, wounded, unhappy, this spelled complete disaster, personal and historical. He was faced with the sad fact that he had fought four and one-half years for nothing—for a mere mirage of military glory. He burst into tears, but he did more than that, he got very angry and decided to do something about this disgrace to his Fatherland.

And he did, too. Very successfully. So very successfully that millions of his countrymen became imbued with his idea of a resurrected Fatherland and they made him a popular idol.

He formed a strong party and became chancellor and staged an effective revolution of his own. He made himself leader and ruled with great vigor. His people were obliged to absorb party principles and philosophy, including 25 rigid points and much more and the cinema went patronless while a nation studied a verbose autobiography and books on racial purity.

He had some unfortunate characteristics—arrogance and intolerance among them—and there were unfortunate elements in his program, too. Some of his people began to fear him and, as he whipped and lashed his country into shape—his shape—with swift, bold, decisive strokes so that it was no longer a bitter, defeated land, neighboring countries began to fear him, too.

For it became apparent that he was inordinately ambitious. He spoke of "Lebensraum" and began to seize large slices of other peoples' territory. The world gasped. Conferences were held. Notes were sent around. The whole globe concentrated on the little man and wondered what he would do next. He did not leave them long in doubt.

More conferences were held. Statesmen winged over the Fatherland and spoke of "appeasement." But the little man was adamant. A war had ruined his country. A war should bring it back to glory.

And so the war came. No one suspected the strength and efficiency of the little man's army, and so it went crashing into one country after another and the little man's flag erupted, with machine-like precision, atop venerable buildings in other peoples' lands.

At last the conquering army thundered on the outskirts of Paris, home of artists—of liberty, equality and fraternity. The little man was not interested in liberty and equality and least of all in fraternity, but he was interested in art. Therefore he did not want Paris destroyed. He said so. But the Parisians did not want Paris destroyed, either. They were artists, too, and rather than see their treasures demolished, they withdrew in sorrow, and left the heart of France, intact, to the little conqueror.

And now the world expected the victorious little man to enter Paris as a hero and ride in triumph up the Champs Elysees. But he surprised everyone again—this inscrutable little man in the brown duster, who took Paris. For he slipped, instead, almost unnoticed, into the Louvre and there experienced the fulfillment of his earliest—and most guileless—dream.

Roosevelt-Willkie Liaison Advisable

MEANS OF ESTABLISHING liaison between the President and Wendell Willkie in matters of foreign policy during the campaign are now being explored by several influential individuals and discussed high in the Administration.

Before the election many actions of grave import in the foreign field may need to be taken. The effect of some of them might be vitiated if they were subjected to partisan debate in the usual campaign atmosphere. Others, because they would certainly invite the attacks of extreme isolationists, might not be taken by the President unless he were assured that the Republican campaign organization would not attempt to turn them to temporary partisan advantage.

Further aid to Great Britain is the best example. It is, or may quickly become, of pressing importance, and it is a field in which Mr. Willkie's prenomination utterances aligned him with the President.

THE POSTPONEMENT of the long-advertised blitzkrieg has tended to divert attention from the seriousness of the plight of Great Britain. Although the British are delivering stout blows in retaliation, their shipping, ports and factories are suffering heavily from German aerial, submarine and torpedo-boat attacks. Their chances of holding out until winter may not be any better then 50-50. Some military observers think they are less.

The scales might be tilted by such small additional aid by means short of war as the United States can give. The British are in need of more destroyers and smaller surface craft. They admit the loss of about 30 destroyers. Even if that figure is correct as to complete losses, many other British destroyers have been put out of action temporarily. Few of the French destroyers fell into their hands.

We have a large fleet of World War destroyers recently recommissioned for Atlantic patrol duty. Twenty, or 25, or 30 of those, sold to the British, might give invaluable aid. As we have just embarked on a great naval building program on the supposition that the British fleet may be destroyed or fall into hostile hands, it obviously would be an excellent investment for us if Great Britain could be saved now by a small number of our old destroyers.

The sale of naval ships is against the law, as it now stands. But if Mr. Willkie as well as the President were to make the request, the law might be altered.

THE BRITISH also want, of course, every additional plane, gun and pound of TNT that we can spare. We haven't much, but we might scrape the bottom of the barrel if convinced that what is left there would be decisive.

The British may desire to send naval ships to our docks for repair. From our viewpoint, in addition to helping Great Britain to continue the war this would put at least a few British naval vessels under our control on this side of the Atlantic.

Another form of aid, bringing women and children to the United States, has considerable popular support here. However, the proposal that American ships be sent for them does not seem likely to get far in Congress, at present.

As Willkie, prior to his nomination, supported the President's policy of aid to the Allies by means short of war, it seems sensible to others who favor that policy that they should cooperate in effecting it during the campaign. Among some of that view there has been, in fact, disappointment that the President has not invited Mr. Willkie to the White House to explore the possibility of reaching a working understanding.

BOTH POLITICAL and personal factors, however, are obstacles to such an accord. Prior to Willkie's nomination the Republican national headquarters had planned to base its campaign against the President largely on the cry that he was leading us to war. On the President's side there is the argument that whether he is re-elected or defeated will depend largely on his conduct of foreign policy. If he shares the dangers of his actions with his Republican opponent, he must also share the credit, it is argued. Moreover, even by consulting Willkie he would be elevating him in importance, whereas the Democratic strategy calls for reducing Willkie to the Vice Presidential level by deputizing Henry Wallace to conduct the main speaking campaign.

Some of the men around the President do not have great confidence in Willkie's willingness to "play the game" and some of the men around Willkie undoubtedly feel the same way about the President and many of his advisers. The President may also recall his own unfortunate experience after his first election in 1932, when President Hoover tried to harness him to the Hoover foreign policy.

The President, after all, has the responsibility. Although Mr. Willkie might be consulted as to a few specific steps, he could hardly digest the daily information which should guide the responsible officials of the Government in determining our policy with regard not only to the British Isles but to the Far East and Latin America.

Nevertheless, accord on at least a few specific aids to Great Britain is sought by persons who hold the confidence of both the President and his opponent. If achieved, it should strengthen the arm of the United States during the next three months, and perhaps open the way for a similar understanding on other questions of foreign policy as they arise.

Horses And The Stars

"You can get more winners in 1940 if you will take advantage of my astrological advice. Four years' study of astrology has put me in a position to know when a horse can win and must lose. Every owner needs astrology to keep his stable out of the red."—From a letter to William Martin, turfman.)

Would you keep your hosses fit?
I've the secret; this is it—
Use the zodiac and you
Can foretell what each will do.

You've lost races, yes, of course,
But you shouldn't blame the horse;
'Tisn't smooth plates, calks or bars;
'Tisn't oats. It's just the stars.

You remember how last week
You thought one was at the peak;
He was very far from tight . . .
Well, the planets weren't right!

He can beat those kind of skates;
Far above 'em all he rates;
He ran seven minutes slow—
Cuz the stars decreed it so.

You remember at the turn
He had pep and speed to burn;
But he didn't hold it long,
Cuz the planets they were wrong.

Racing trainers, you're asleep;
If a fortune you would reap
Don't depend on charts and men—
Consult Saturn now and then.

Owners, too, should do the same;
When you lose, who is to blame?
Don't debate it all the night . . .
Venus wasn't feeling right.

Oats and hay may do their part;
Training, too's, a happy art,
But if you'd make hosses pay
Feed 'em in the Milky Way.

Jockeys? Bah! They're just a laugh;
Never have one on the staff;
When they ask, "Who's on that plug?"
Say "It's Capricorn . . . with bug."

Huh!

A clean campaign is under way,
Each issue will be met;
There'll be no smears from either side,
Nor anger . . . Wanna bet?
—R. W. Rogers.

Ed Chalmers says that the recent Democratic convention reminded him of the old-fashioned surprise party when the first to know all about it was the one to be surprised.

Political Conscience

I have a little conscience that goes in and out with me,
And what can be the use of it is not so hard to see;
Sometimes it's so enormous that I can't evade its call. . . .
But when that doesn't suit me,
why, it's hardly there at all.

Riviera Loses Charm

THE PASSENGER lists of the clippers and boats these last few months, and especially since the Nazis broke through, have shown the true character of many rich Americans who loved the French and English so when peace was on and, in those days, came back to the U. S. A. only to bury their dead, see their lawyers and confirm their conviction that their native land wasn't fit for the likes of them to live in. The perils and privations of war have driven back many wrinkled hulks who suddenly discovered, after decades of expatriate life, an overwhelming love for the land which, to them, was just a source of income and whose people were fit only to be despised as vulgar tourists.

They "understood" the French and English, who likewise, appreciated them not least because they were receiving money from the toil of American workers. They were a curious, stateless monstrosity without loyalty for their own country or affection for their own people, and, the truth to tell, without the respect of those whose approval they tried to buy.

NOW, HOWEVER, when the French and English would seem to stand most in need of that understanding friendship which they professed, swarms of them have been struggling home, drawn by a sudden and irresistible nostalgia for a crude country where the Nazis are not yet and the siren's shriek at night means only that Engine 6 is rolling down to douse a burning cigaret on an awning up the street.

It is, indeed, odd that the Riviera has suddenly lost its charm. Odd, too, it is that dear Paris and those quaint fishing villages have somehow ceased to enchant the soul of the permanent absentee whose passport was only a means of identification in cashing checks and license to pester the consuls.

This would seem to be the very time to prove that deep friendship for the people of France and England by sharing their sufferings and dangers, but the fact is, as the French and English always knew, that this type of American lacked all loyalty and lived only for vanity and pleasure.

THIS WAR, if it does no other good, will not have been entirely in vain if, as seems probable, it results in the final extinction of an ugly little group of off-Americans who began to settle in Europe in the first decade of this century and, naturally, found their kindred among the prideless moochers of the busted aristocracy.

Among the suddenly patriotic Americans who have shoved French cripples, children and women off the roads in their flight by auto for the exit ports and Spain have been individuals who, in 20 or 30 years, had come only as an unpleasant necessity and who certainly gave the French every reason to believe that, in a crisis, they would stand by and help them suffer.

In the early days of the war there were no more glamorous and petulant naggers at the steamship offices and consulates than former patriate Americans whose only decent service to their native land in all their lives had been to leave it.

The war surely will liquidate this colony, most of whom are now too old to make themselves offensive around the gaudy gin-mills of New York. They will limp off on gouty legs to end their days in bicarb and liver shots in the weather-beaten grandeur of Newport or making themselves hateful to the maids and bellhops in hotels. It is not in the cards that any new generation of expatriates will arise and replace them abroad.

The French and British won't forget that a rekindled love of their despised homeland yanked them away in a tumbling hurry when trouble came and won't be wanting a duplicate order.

Third Corps Area Starts Recruiting For Record Quota

Baltimore, July 30 (AP).—Recruiting officers set out today to fill the greatest peacetime quota ever assigned the Third Corps Area.

The War Department, seeking to boost the Regular Army strength to 375,000 men, directed the Third Corps Area—including Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia—to sign up 5,266 men for various branches of the service.

The new quota comes on the heels of another recent large assignment for the area—3,200 men.

No time limit has been set for reaching the quota, but War Department officials have indicated that completion of the drive within the month is expected.

Recruits will be given technical training in many branches. While the majority will be assigned to domestic fields, large numbers will be given duty in Hawaii, the Philippines or Puerto Rico.

Hull's Statement

Leaving, He Praises 'Act of Havana'

By the Associated Press

Havana, July 30.—United States Secretary of State Hull, sailing for home from the Havana conference of American foreign ministers, declared tonight the meeting had "cleared the decks for effective action" to meet dangers to continental security and economy.

In a long statement reviewing the action of the conference, which ended tonight with the formal signing of documents in Cuba's palatial capitol, Hull said the "American governments have manifested their full recognition of dangers which confront them in common and have created machinery for common action."

"Instead of faltering and abandoning the spirit of unity and concerted steps for safety, they have demonstrated to the world their unalterable determination to preserve and strengthen the spirit and system of continental unity and solidarity. They have just cleared the decks for effective action whenever such action may become necessary."

Roosevelt Pleased

[In Washington, President Roosevelt told his press conference that on the basis of general reports received the conference seemed to have been very, very successful.—Editor's note.]

Hull was cheered loudly as he stepped to the large table in the capitol to affix his signature to the various conference measures.

The program to which they attached their names consists of:

1. A so-called "Act of Havana," which definitely declares all the American republics to be opposed to change or menace of change in the status of European possessions in this hemisphere.

2. Inter-American cooperation to combat the "fifth column" or other infiltrating subversive elements which may exist or seek to exist in this hemisphere.

3. Mutual effort to maintain economics in an "American way," with precautions against market dislocations caused by the European war, and to guard against encroachment of European barter systems.

Reservations Glossed Over

Argentina's last-minute "reservations to the "Act of Havana" and to the accompanying convention defining the methods of protecting any threatened European colony, were glossed over almost entirely in this closing session. To the very last, Argentina objected to making definite conference commitments which would give any of the American republics the right to move protectively into European colonies in this hemisphere.

Melo affixed his name and the Argentine seal to the documents, but he said beforehand that it must be approved by his country's Congress if Argentina is to participate effectively.

Miguel Angel Campa, Cuban secretary of state and president of the conference, said in his closing speech:

"Humanity will learn a lesson from the example of the American nations having worked together for fruitful results. . . .

"Nobody will doubt in the future—however skeptical he may be—the unbreakable union of this hemisphere and the harmonic neighborliness of these great peoples who, with foresight, exert themselves to maintain peace and their right to happiness."

No Thought of Grabbing

Putting the action on European possessions in this hemisphere at the top of the list of conference achievements, Hull in his statement declared:

"I cannot too strongly emphasize at this point that at no time has any American nation had the slightest thought of taking advantage of the European situation for the purpose of grabbing territory—quite the contrary. The thought has been to protect the peace and safety of this continent.

"At the beginning there was a difference in view as to the modus operandi for achieving the desired end in relation to foreign possessions.

Provision for Action

"In certain quarters (apparently referring mainly to Argentina) there was a feeling that until the transfer of sovereignty or control had actually taken place it would be sufficient to have no more than a general declaration reasserting the meeting of definite methods of procedure to cope with any situation that might arise.

"I was realized that provision should be made for prompt action in any emergency situation and that delay pending later consultation might be disastrous to maintenance of peace and order in the Western Hemisphere.

"The principle of solidarity and consultation has been agreed upon at previous conferences.

"On the other hand, there was strong feeling on the part of other delegations, including that of the United States, that having in mind the situation now obtaining in Europe, and the fact that transfer of sovereignty might be made overnight or without formality, and that activities in these regions detrimental to peace and safety of the Americas might be begun momentarily, it was necessary to formulate this."

Differences Reconciled

Thus the differences were reconciled, Hull said, and the conference produced the "Act of Havana" and its companion convention which gave any nation "the right to act singly or jointly in emergency."

Hull added that such action could be taken by a nation "in any manner required in its own defense or in defense of the continent."

In the economic field, Hull said the groundwork was laid for protection and develeopment of inter-American economy.

"Some measures," he related, "can be put into operation very quickly, while some will require time for maturing and execution of appropriate plans.

Economic Defense

"It is a system of economic defense under which the American republics will be prepared to trade with any nation willing to meet them in good faith, in a spirit of friendly, peaceful purpose, and on plans for frank, fair dealing, and under which they will be fully equipped to protect themselves against any other kind of dealing."

Of measures adopted to combat Fifth Column activities, Hull said:

"American republics have resolved that political institutions and aggressive practices of other nations shall not be imposed upon the free and independent peoples of this hemisphere."

Await Developments

Amplifying his explanation of the Argentine stand, Melo said today:

"I declared in the subcommittee I would sign the Havana measures, but not as plenipotentiary. This attitude was due to the fact that when I left Buenos Aires a definite program for the Havana conference and its commitments was not clear; hence I was not given plenipotentiary powers."

Argentina's ultimate attitude, he said, would be determined by "developments as they occur." He noted that the Act of Havana and the convention of Havana were "somewhat coolly received by some nations."

Regarding the economic achievements of the Havana conference, Melo said he thought the United States proposals for absorption of surpluses were superficial and of fleeting benefit.

The conference had failed, he asserted, to bring forward any far-reaching "general plan" for continuous economic collaboration.

Germans Take Cheer

Berlin, July 30 (AP).—Commenting on the Havana conference, the Boersen Zeitung said tonight the outstanding fact appears to be American realization that England is so near defeat it is high time to consider who is to inherit her New World possessions.

"England's possessions, in the eyes of the Americas, are ripe for mandates," the paper asserted, continuing:

"It is a fact doubtless unpleasant to Englishmen and hardly calculated to raise English prestige."

The paper then quoted the Trinidad (British West Indies) Guardian as saying the situation of New World colonies is that of a very sick man around whom surgeons gather to discuss the wisdom of an operation, without bothering to consult the patient himself.

Books And Things

Kentucky Folk

IT SEEMS THAT old Horatio Catlett, whose inn had sheltered Gen. Jackson and Henry Clay, got into financial difficulties and lost his property. On the final day he trudged into the hostel to talk with the new management, and engaged in argument. So heated was the discussion that old Horatio fell dead on the spot. There was no foul play; Horatio's own Kentucky passion did him off, and so his respectful fellow-citizens gave his name to Catlettsburg, where the Big Sandy pours its mountain water into the Ohio River. . . . And that is the keynote of Kentucky character, as Jean Thomas pictures it in "Big Sandy" (Holt, $2.75).

Jean Thomas herself comes of mountain people, and those who recall her "Lost Hope Hollow" and "Traipsin' Woman" stories will know what to expect of this, her new book. As court stenographer she first found her way into the feud country; then she traipsed up the coves and hollows, ballad-catching, and made friends. She knew old Devil Anse Hatfield and his son Jonse, who, according to her version of the Hatfield-McCoy epic, was responsible for most of the trouble; she knew "Daffy John" when he was just a crazy fellow who wore rags and leased bad lands, before coal made him a multimillionaire; and she has brought ballad-singers out of the coves to sing to the radio on the level land. She has a right to be a mite sentimental about the ways of the old timers.

She tells in "Big Sandy" of Lark Hewitt, of Lonesome Creek, who went down to Boydville to make his everlasting fortune. He had plowed and hoed and grubbed from sunup to nightfall, on the land he'd heired (sic) from his pa, and yet he never had a dollar of cash money. He didn't want to be contrarious or to leave the rhododendron ridges, but he'd heard that if he took his guitar and sang his songs at the radio station he could buy some pretties for his wife. But his wife Ellen just couldn't get naturalized to people who came knocking on the door without halloing, and after he'd made one payment on a carpet-sweeper, he found he needed cash money to make the water spurt in the pipe or the electric juice flow or even to use a gas stove. The radio men laughed at him; the carpet-sweeper men took his contraption back; Ellen left the electric iron on, and the house caught fire; the baby jiggled the brake off the go-cart and rolled in front of a truck. . . .

"A body's happier not to forsake the ways of their elders; it's contrarious to the nat're of us mountain people to forsake the old for the new," said Lucretia, who told Jean Thomas the story of Lark Hewitt.

JEAN THOMAS offers a long and circumsantial and flavorfully told history of the Hatfield-McCoy feud; a pleasant story of her own stay with a moonshining family, when she had sprained her ankle slipping off a log; accounts of singin' gatherin's, church meetin's, funeralizin's and lawyerin'. I have no doubt that she knows her people and their Elizabethan speechways. Chaucer and Spenser said "wropt" for wrapped and "clomb" for climbed, "furder" for further, just as these mountain people do today; Shakespeare would not have found their use of words like "contrareous," "techeous" and "lasty" even quaint. It is much the same flavorous speech as Jesse Stuart uses, writing of his people in Greenup County, just to the west of the lower Big Sandy; it seems to have an antique earthiness about it.

Havana Triumph

By Barnet Nover

Constructive Pan-Americanism

Havana.

THE HAVANA meeting came in like a lamb but went out like a lion. When it opened less than a fortnight ago there was little optimism regarding its outcome. The general feeling was that the delegates would not leave the Cuban capital empty-handed; they could hardly afford to do so in the face of the present international situation. But few believed the parley would have any constructive accomplishments to its credit.

Actually, the results achieved here have gone considerably beyond expectations. The Havana meeting was not only one of the most fruitful in terms of achievement, it was also the boldest. Indeed, it may mark a very important turning point in the history of the Americas. For here in Havana representatives of the 21 republics went beyond pious declarations and took the first major steps ever taken by an inter-American gathering to translate the wish to cooperate into concrete action.

THIS CANNOT wholly be proved by the texts of the agreements which the delegates approved at yesterday's plenary session.

At times, indeed, the language employed in the resolutions and conventions are vague almost to the point of meaninglessness, as though the delegates, shrinking from the new and untried methods of co-operation made necessary by the pull of extremely disturbing events, sought refuge in verbal obscurity. The language of the final texts is also, at times, eloquent of the circumstances that at this conference, too, faces had to be saved, prides assuaged, legalistic objections overcome. Indeed, two of the conference's ten days were spent in little else but word play. In this process the strong drink of determination was somewhat watered down to make it palatable to 21 divergent tastes.

Yet it is significant, and to no small extent gratifying, that the struggle at Havana during the closing days was over words, not principles, over degree, not direction, over methods of action not over the wisdom of acting.

THE HAVANA meeting proved that Pan Americanism is no frail plant capable of being overthrown by the first evil wind blowing in from across the seas.

There has been a disposition in some quarters, hitherto, to dismiss what had been done during the last seven years at Montevideo, Buenos Aires and Lima as eloquent sound and fury signifying nothing. But if those inter-American meetings did nothing more than provide the machinery which made possible the speedy summoning of the conference which met here last week and this week, and the constructive results that were achieved here, those parleys more than justified themselves.

The unanswered question when the Havana meeting began was whether the willingness to consult would be accompanied by a readiness to act and that, in turn, by a capacity to act. The tragic history of the Scandinavian nations and the Balkan states during the past year shows that it is not enough for a group of nations to show a disposition to confer together; effective unity is made of far sterner stuff.

AT HAVANA yesterday the nations of this hemisphere took a long step in the direction of concerted action. This is progress weighed on any scale of international values.

The Havana parley did not, to be sure, result in the creation of an American League of Nations, or an American commonwealth. It did result in the establishment of a system of collective administration capable of being applied, and speedily applied if need be, to the colonies of European nations threatened with the destruction of their sovereignty. The situation that the nations of the New World have taken steps to meet may never arise. The very existence of the Act of Havana may preclude the necessity of its having to be put into force. Yet the fact that the delegates assembled at Havana found it possible to ignore long-standing inhibitions and newly created threats, and by unanimous decision, to present a united front to the enemies of American security, is a tremendous accomplishment.

THE OUTCOME of the Havana meeting is a triumph for the spirit of solidarity often invoked at Pan American gatherings, but never before put to a real test. But that spirit might have remained in the nebulous realm of rhetoric had it not been for one man—Cordell Hull.

The hero of the Havana parley was the American Secretary of State. No man at the conference worked harder than he. No man was more patient, more tolerant, more deeply solicitous of the wishes and views and attitudes of the other delegations. And be it said, also, that no man enjoyed greater personal esteem.

His first appearance on the scene, at the plenary session of July 21, resulted in a spontaneous demonstration of affection. And he did nothing to weaken that sentiment. He came to Havana a veteran of three major Latin-American conferences. He never had a more difficult task than faced him this time. For what he found, at the outset, was an atmosphere of doubt and irresolution.

By dint of persistent effort expressed not only around the conference tables but in many a heart-to-heart talk with the chiefs of the other delegations, he brought order out of chaos, understanding out of confusion, strength out of weakness. With infinite patience he disabused the minds of those who came to this meeting certain that they would find burglars under the bed. He infused life in what was at first a lifeless affair with several of the major delegations coming here only because it would have been impolite not to have come. The Havana meeting marks a new and constructive stage in Pan Americanism. The principal architect of that promising edifice bears the name of Cordell Hull.

General Headquarters Chief To Make Office Of Airplane

By the Associated Press

Fort Leavenworth, Kans., July 30. The Army's newly-created general headquarters will use air speed to shrink the great distance separating the Nation's continental field forces.

"I'll have my office in an airplane most of the time," Brig. Gen. Lesley J. McNair said today.

The tall, kindly officer, who relinquishes direction of the command general staff school here to take charge of the newly formed military agency, said there was a "very clear-cut need" for its unprecedented peace-time creation.

"Very Necessary Step"

"It is a wise, timely and very necessary step," he said.

By recreating a general headquarters such as that which directed World War field operations, but now to be concerned only with training, the War Department "does not contemplate the organization of field forces as though we were going to war," Gen. McNair asserted.

"But," he added, "we are in the process of organizing a great many troop units, and they are increasing all the while, so it is only logical that we begin to organize a general headquarters as well as other elements of our field forces."

Purposes of G. H. Q.

Gen. McNair outlined the present purposes of the G. H. Q.:

1. "To develop and state training needs, objectives and methods.

2. "The inspection of troop movements all over the United States—but not the overseas departments—with the idea of following up their progress in training.

3. "The coordination of our forces to secure a common standard of performance so that the various pieces of the Army will fit together and work as a single team."

Gen. McNair's job essentially will be to condition the American Army for fighting along standardized lines. "We can issue orders, but they must be followed up and checked to see that they are executed in the same manner. This is a difficulty in our Army."

An immediate task of the general headquarters, the supreme command post of all the field forces, will be to inspect all maneuvers next month by the four armies of the military establishment, "in the role of an observer with a view of taking stock of our troops." The maneuvers are to be held at Camp Ripley, Minn.; Camp Lewis, on the Pacific Coast; Camp McCoy, Wis.; Plattsburg, N. Y., and in western Louisiana.

The American soldier, in Gen. McNair's opinion, "is the finest in the world." Of course, he added, the "soldier of today requires more specialized and intricate training—more training in these highly complicated weapons and new vehicles for mobility and speed—and unit leaders must possess initiative and the ability to act independently, but we feel our soldier is so intelligent and thoughtful that these requirements are all in our favor."

For Europe's War Victims:

Washington Plays Good Neighbor Role

By Charles Mercer.

Mix the elements of patience and generosity with time, money and goods, and you have the recipe for good neighborliness.

Employed widely by large numbers of Washingtonians since the outbreak of the European war, the recipe is earning for the Nation's Capital the name of good neighbor to the war's victims.

Something of the magnitude of Americans' giving can be found in the files of the State Department where are listed 282 organizations—aside from the Red Cross—which up to June 1 had contibuted $6,613,893.49 in money and goods, with an unexpended balance of $2,085,674.50, for European civilian aid.

The part Washington is playing in this effort is shown by relief organizations that are still functioning here despite the difficulty of sending money or materials abroad at the present time.

At 1331 Connecticut avenue is the unique sight of a group of knit one, purl two stalwarts for Britain's defense, working under the direction of a former lady-in-waiting of the Empress of Russia who has never been in England.

Mme. Irene Mishtowt is the executive secretary of the Washington chapter of Bundles for Britain, founded by a group of women under the leadership of Mrs. Wales Latham, Mrs. George A. Garrett, and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss. You can take her word as the word of the 1400 women knitting under her, that they won't quit. You have the word of the Queen of England that their work is excellent and of great help to the people of Britain.

"So far we've sent out 1,070 knitted articles done by women in Washington and vicinity," reports Mme. Mishtowt, who has lived in this country since 1907 when she came here from Russia. "We've also sent more than 4,000 articles of clothing since we opened here on May 20. But that's just the beginning."

She explained that clothing contributed or made by wommen for Bundles for Britain is reaching its destination by means of the British convoy system. Shipping concerns are transporting the goods free of charge, she said.

This is one of a series of articles on civilian war relief agencies active in Washington. The District Red Cross chapter is not included, as the work has been described elsewhere by The Post.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Beautiful Girl, 16, Boldly Makes Love to Elder Sister's Beau, Who Fondly and Humorously Indulges Her; Can Serious Triangular Conflict Be Prevented?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Since January, I have been going with a man 28 years old. He is a man of fine morals and we belong to the same church. Since our first date, he has telephoned daily, comes to see me as often as possible, takes me to delightful places and has given me many lovely gifts. I appreciated the fact that he didn't try to kiss me until we had gone together for several weeks and discovered we were in love.

I have three beautiful sisters—one married, one engaged and a third who is in love with my beau (whom I shall call Ray). She is only 16 but she looks and acts much older. From the first time Ray came to see me, she has made love to him openly—in a somewhat teasing vein although with the most serious intent. She sits on his lap, puts her arms around his neck, looks deep in his eyes, cries when he gives me expensive presents and tells me that she knows he must care some for her, because of the things he says to her.

For instance, one evening when Ray was there, another friend of mine came in and my sister immediately snuggled up to Ray. It seems (or so she told me later) that she asked him why he couldn't love her instead of her sister, and he replied, "Who said I loved your sister?" When she told me this, it was more than I could bear, so later, in a nice way, I mentioned it to him. He laughed and said it was silly for her to think he was serious, and that he wouldn't joke with her any more.

On top of this, however, and in spite of the fact that he claims to love me so much, he always asked her to go every place we went. So, rather foolishly, I chided him about always inviting the whole family. I really enjoy going out with others, because it's more fun as a rule, but when two people are in love I think it's natural for them to want to be alone together sometimes, especially when there is absolutely no chance to talk confidentially at home.

I realize, of course, that it is his privilege to ask whom he chooses, but I had stopped dating other boys on his account (although he hadn't asked me to). Thinking that perhaps I had shown that I cared too much (in mentioning my sister, etc.), I changed my tactics when an old beau of mine came East three weeks ago. I managed to have him here a number of times, when Ray telephoned or came over. (I will call this boy Lin.) Lin and I flirted a bit in Ray's presence, although there were no demonstrations of affection, except that Lin made it plain, by his remarks and close attentiveness, that he cares for me.

Lin is a nice boy and good-looking, but not my type, so I didn't really encourage him. In fact, I never gave him a single date until after Ray became somewhat stand-offish on seeing him around so much. Then I took a plane ride with Lin; we went swimming together once and another time we went to the movies. He knew I was in love with Ray but he continued to hang around constantly. When I saw this was spoiling things for Ray and me I asked him to stay away.

One night last week when Ray telephoned, I invited him over. It so happened that Lin was taking my younger sister for a drive, so we (Ray and I) had a chance for a little talk before they returned. When I asked why he had changed so, he evaded by saying that he had been very busy . . . Finally, he said I must have given Lin some encouragement, or he wouldn't be around so much. Then I told him that I didn't love Lin; that I did love him; and that I had asked Lin to stop pestering me. He retorted that I must like Lin "plenty" to have flirted with him as I did. I reminded him of his attentions to my sister, and he said it was ridiculous for sisters to feel that way. He said, "Perhaps you are jealous." I said, "Maybe so." But it seems to me he was a little jealous, too. Do you think he would have been less annoyed if Lin had been his brother?

Anyway, he asked me to go to church with him, saying he would drive me to work after services. But since I had seen so little of him for weeks, I said I preferred just to talk until time to report for work. Well, just about then, my sister and Lin got home. Ray asked, "Does Lin go your way?" I said, "Yes, it's on his way home." Then he replied, "Well, you might as well ride along with him, if you want to." I guess that was the cue for my exit; but I was just too dumfounded to take it. Lin left without me.

When I left the room to get ready for work, Ray asked my sister to ride along with us, and said he'd take her for a drive after dropping me off. (That night of all nights—after what I had told him!) He paid her a few compliments as we drove along, and when they let me out, he called after me, rather laughingly, "Call me up some time." I telephoned home around 11:30 and they had just got in.

Later she told me that he had teased her, as usual, saying, among other things, "Now we're alone." When she told him how much she was in love with a certain man who didn't love her he said that he couldn't imagine a man not loving a girl so lovely who loved a man so much. Also, he told her how much he could love a woman who loved him and only him—even if he hadn't loved her at first.

Then they discussed me. He asked her if she thought a girl in love could even think of going out with another man. He said he hadn't dated any other girl since he had gone with me. He asked her if she thought Lin and I were in love. And he mentioned that I never make the first move toward being affectionate. (Well, I certainly feel "affection," but I don't believe in overburdening a man with it!)

Tell me, Miss Haworth, am I in love with this man? Or just with the image I had of him in the beginning? Should I telephone him and say I am sorry? Or what should I do? Please let me hear from you immediately—and accept my thanks in advance.

Let Younger Sister Play Out Her Hand

DEAR E. M.: It is a pity that your sister should be ruining what otherwise might have become a very fine relationship (possibly leading to marriage) between yourself and your beau. As things stand, I believe she has already done irreparable damage. She has sown the seeds of mutual distrust and hostility, and when such weeds have once found root, even transiently, in a given relationship, the beauty and promise of the prospect are forever spoiled a little.

It is placing too much of a burden on the man to expect him to be severely unresponsive to your beautiful, headstrong young sister's ardent overtures. And it is likewise asking too much of you to forgive his flattered, indulgent, encouraging reaction. And there is the deadlock that neither of you can break by an act of the will, however much you might like to do so.

As you have already learned, it was a mistake to complicate the conflict further, by introducing a counter-current of rivalry and jealousy; but it was a human, understandable and pardonable mistake, considering the provocation and the fact that you are neither a saint nor a sage.

The best advice I can give you is to stand aside and let your sister play out her little drama with your beau. This will require heroic courage, patience and self-control—but it is the only way of letting the basic truth about the whole triangular situation assert itself. Don't seek after him. Offer no apologies. When he calls at your home, keep a sweetly neutral attitude. See him, go out with him; if you like—but on an impenetrably amiable, impersonal, non-sweethearting basis.

Your sister is expressing her nature in throwing herself at his head. You are being true to yourself in maintaining a more elusive, mature and better balanced attitude. Let the man decide for himself which girl of the two—when known at first hand on a non-competitive basis—really satisfies the needs of his mind and heart. And if, finally, he votes in your favor—then it will be time enough for you to decide whether you want him or you don't. M. H.

Dora Miller, Back From France, Tells Of Plans for Using Fabric in Practical Ways; Cites Its Value for Beguiling Men

"WEAR something lacy and get your man." This already may have become a maxim with worldly women. It becomes a practical one when Dora Loues Miller, International authority on lace, urges "Wear lace and HOLD your man."

MARSHALL ADAMS

This advice sounds neither frilly nor facetious, coming from the much-traveled Miss Miller, who was in Washington yesterday, fresh from Parisian evacuation last month. The stylist feels that every feminizing task the American woman can put herself to is of importance now. While not at war, the woman here at home or at work can aid in morale building by appearing dainty, feminine and womanly—certainly anything but cynical or hard-boiled over the political situation.

Lace Predictions for Fall

Miss Miller has been an American citizen in France since 1918, cementing relations there between Parisian couturiers and American lace merchants, to whom the Miller style judgment has become a law. Through her seasonal collections of original French gowns Miss Miller has made this country so lace conscious that we'll probably all be thrown into jabots, lace panties and romantic duenna gowns by fall. With Calais, former lace capital, a productive shambles, Miss Miller has convinced leading lace firms of this country to produce quality laces after original French designs. Though these mills will make no profit on these smaller amounts of finer goods, they will at least maintain French standards of fine machine laces until Calais can get on its feet as a French productive unit.

This "one-woman lace lobbyist" predicted that laces will soon be tailored to the American taste in neat blouses, scarfs, trim vestees, tailored lingerie and in dinner gowns. Already designers Dache, Florence Reichman and Sally Victor have made fetching yet practical fall sports hats of stitched lace, with John Frederics holding down the more dramatic interpretations of lace fans and mantillas. Miss Miller plans to present these all-American designs August 24 at a Newport style promenade and ball.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

IT IS RELIABLY reported that Gale Page is deserting the movies for radio, the reason being that in radio a girl can eat without losing her glamour. So, apparently, that precious thing called glamour is supposed to go with a good figure!

That's very interesting . . . Miss Page was the mysterious movie actress who, two years back, reduced from 165 pounds to 130 and slimmed down from a size 20 to a sylphlike 14. Her name was left out of my account of her slimming program—not that she minded in the least, but the publicity department did. They had a competent actress and a rising young star on their hands, and it didn't sound so good to them to have her reducing—just like any other mortal. Evidently a star is supposed to be above avoirdupois!

At the time, Miss Page told me she was convinced that what it takes to slim down is a combination of concentration, application and ambition. And she seemed to have plenty of what it takes.

One Hollywood Solution

Her about-face would almost lead you to believe that it is harder to keep slim than to get slim. That may be true for a movie star who must hold her weight down to 10 per cent below normal in order to photograph beautifully slim. Either that, or she must have such excellent muscle tone that she looks streamlined at normal weight. That's the way any number of Hollywood stars solve their weight problem. Could it be Miss Page didn't keep on with her exercise?

But the average person doesn't have to trim down as fine as the film players, and she finds it far easier to keep slim than to get slim. To reduce one must eat so little food that stored fat is used for energy. But to keep the weight at normal it is necessary only to avoid eating more food than is required. It's as easy as that!

If you want to keep slim without a struggle you will change your food habits while changing your weight. The trouble with "dieting" to reduce is that as soon as you go off the diet you start right in to regain the lost pounds.

Regular Exercise Important

You'll stay slim naturally as long as you build your menus around the essential protective foods and keep your calorie intake down to the 1,500 to 1,800 per day which you actually require. It's the safe dietary plan of "eat what you need first, then eat what you please within your calorie limits."

And don't lose sight of the fact that regular exercise is very important to permanent slimness, for well-toned muscles are much less susceptible to fatty deposits.

And if you do have to work a bit to keep slim just be glad you are not a movie star—who has a hard time keeping slimmer!

A WOMAN'S

WASHINGTON

Mrs. Russell Roller, Still-Life Artist, Sketches Fruits, Flowers to Be Patented

MRS. RUSSELL ROLLER, 7135 Chestnut street northwest, has painted as many still lifes as any artist on record. And she has the added satisfaction of knowing in advance that she will be paid for each one.

Her job is to prepare water color sketches of fruits and flowers which their growers hope to patent. She has been at it since 1930, when the Plant Patent Act went into effect. Her first assignment was a carnation, first of the species and third plant of any kind to be awarded a United States patent. Since that time the Roller household seldom has lacked for flowers and edibles; the proud grower sends generous samples of his product, be it roses, pecans, apples, peaches, strawberries or sugar cane.

She receives orders through a local attorney who specializes in plant patent work. A complete job—including a duplicate painting for the Department of Agriculture, which searches the claim—takes from 10 to 15 hours and nets her $40.

Carol Piper, secretary to Chester Davis, of the Federal Reserve Board, says that since her boss has been named to the Defense Commission she spends most of her time at the telephone. She claims she dials the Department of Agriculture so often that the operators, who handle about 13,000 incoming calls a day, now recognize her voice.

CULINARY NOTE—If you like spaghetti with meat sauce—and lots of it—here's a recipe for you. It calls for 40 pounds of spaghetti, about 75 pounds of ground beef, three gallons of tomatoes and five pounds of onions, plus proportionate quantities of garlic, chopped peppers and catsup.

The dish is popular at the CCC camp in Benning, where plates are laid for about 175 hungry boys. The meat sauce was invented after the chef had tried unsuccessfully to find a prepared sauce that was both tasty and economical.

Incidentally, the boys don't know it but the trade name of the black pepper and the coconut used in the camp kitchen is "Lovely."

Jenny Turnbull, physical education instructor at George Washington University, knows her news photographers. A Post cameraman, out to photograph some of her girl hockey players, barely had taken his camera from the case when she bore down on him and said firmly, "No more leg art, please."

DID YOU KNOW . . . that Tudor place, one of Georgetown's most historic mansions, is occupied by Armistead Peter, direct descendant of the Thomas Peter who built it about 1800? He married Martha Parke Custis, granddaughter of Martha Washington. Their children worked out an elaborate signal system, according to legend, and by waving petticoats from the mansion's windows, they could communicate with their Custis cousins, who lived across the river in Arlington House.

Teach Yourself To Swim

AWAY they go through the water in a speedy American crawl, while you stand wistfully wishing you'd put your swimming into the expert class.

Well, you can—teaching yourself with right instructions. If you've been learning half-right and half-wrong—as beginners often do—no wonder you sputter and choke, lag exhausted in the wake of good swimmers.

Test your crawl kick, for instance, to see whether you're doing it in efficient style. Grasp a stationary object and lie on the water, keeping your head up.

Now start to kick, working your legs—knees straight—up and down in ticktock rhythm. If your heels splash the water a lot, you are kicking too high. Keep toes pointed backward and inward and heels pointed outward. This way, you kick with greater foot surface and get more power.

Do you breathe in cupfuls of water? You can practice proper breathing for the crawl in shallow water or even in the bath tub. With your head facing down in the water, start counting from 1 to 6. On count 4, turn head to side and gulp air through the mouth. On count 6, turn your face into the water and begin to exhale through the nose.

Do you tire easily. You may be too tense. Relax in the water—water—let it hold you up.

Stay-at-Homes Give Up Liking Capital Summer

Those Who Can Get Away Are Heading For Cooler Spots in New England; Several to Depart This Week-End

By Dudley Harmon

"I LIKE Washington in the summer," a phrase stoutly reiterated in June by those who intended to stick it out here, has disappeared from conversation these days. Wilted residents have given up the pretense of thinking Washington other than simply terrible at this moment, and there's a consequent exodus North by all those who can get away.

Mrs. George Barnett will leave very shortly for visits in the North—but doesn't know if she'll meet her famous cousin, the Duchess of Windsor, in New York en route. Mrs. Barnett does not like to be quoted much on her headline-making relative, and yesterday when quizzed said only "I have no idea when they will land." However, she has heard from the Windsors fairly recently.

The widow of the last war's Marine Corps commandant has been very active in the "Urgent Relief for France" since that group was started in Washington. She has been summering at Wakefield Manor, her historic old house near Front Royal, Va. Her trip North will include visits to Narragansett, Gloucester, on the Massachusetts North Shore, and Nantucket, quaint little fishing island thirty miles from the coast and the farthest outpost of the United States.

New England, which rather frightened people away at first, so cold was our early summer, is now drawing them by the thousands. Judge and Mrs. Lawrence Groner have chosen Cape Cod as a vacation spot and have taken a house at Centerville. Mrs. Groner's daughters, the Misses Betty and Marion Shouse, will go North with their family. Mid-September will see the former back here again to make plans for her wedding to Cuthbert Train, which will take place toward the end of October.

Off today for a brief stay at York Harbor is Mrs. Gale McLean. She has been on the job here much of the summer with the American Women's Voluntary Service, which she heads. Another worker for this group, Mrs. Robert Lord, is in New York for a few days en route to Watch Hill, where she will visit her parents, the former Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Truman Newberry.

Mrs. McCook Knox will motor to Pittsburgh this week-end on business, staying at the Rolling Rock Country Club. She has been in Washington most of the summer and will be back here Monday.

Mrs. Sidney Lee is off the end of the week for various visits in New Jersey, Long Island and Vermont. She will not return to her Georgetown home until after Labor Day.

Quite a lot of Washingtonians are congregated around Bayville, L. I. Mrs. Charles Courtney and her daughter, Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, have as their guest there this week Christopher Bramwell of the British Embassy. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios had with them the past Saturday and Sunday George Abell, who returned yesterday to his apartment here.

Playwright Noel Coward Expected Here Soon

The famous playwright, Noel Coward, who was reported to be coming to Washingtgon yesterday, remained in New York instead. The British Embassy expects him here shortly, but doesn't know the exact date. The author is bringing, it's said, an important message to the Ambassador, Lord Lothian.

Georges Coulon And Wife Hosts At Luncheon

Minister of Yugoslavia And Mme. Fotitch Among Their Guests

M. and Mme. Georges Coulon, an attractive French couple who sailed for this country the day the Armistice was declared, entertained at a small luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower. M. and Mme. Coulon are staying at the Wardman Park while visiting here.

Their guests yesterday were the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell and George Abell. Mrs. Pell will return to Bermuda later in the season for another stay.

Others lunching at the Mayflower yesterday included the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, who was with Drew Pearson; Mrs. Harold Walker, Mrs. Newbold Walmsley, accompanied by Mrs. Sims Snow, and the Norwegian, Finnish and Danish Ministers, who lunch together weekly.

Alan Goldenberg Weds Toledo Girl In Ohio City

The marriage of Miss Gene Morgan, daughter of Mrs. David Morgan, of Toledo, Ohio, to Alan H. Goldenberg, of Washington, son of Mrs. Helen Goldenberg, took place yesterday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, at the Commodore Hotel in Toledo. A reception and supper followed the ceremony.

The bride, who was unattended, was given in marriage by her uncle, Matthew Morgan. She wore a long frock of yellow chiffon, trimmed in gray, a small yellow hat with a matching veil, and carried purple orchids.

Leo David, of Washington, was the best man.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

TWO OF THE most important hostesses in Havana during the conference of the Americas will be claimed by Washington. They are Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador to Washington, and Mrs. George Messersmith, wife of the United States Ambassador to Cuba.

Mme. Espil has made it her practice, during the conference, to give informal little luncheon parties every day. Her guests include diplomats, advisory experts to the conference and members of the press.

Lunching with Mme. Espil the other day were several Washingtonians, among them the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf Berle, jr., Senor and Senora Luis Mariano Zuberbuhler—she is the former Margot Garrett—Alonso Irigoyen, financial counselor to the Argentine Embassy in Washington, and Harold Hinton, of the New York Times.

• • • •

MRS. MESSERSMITH, of course, gave the delightful buffet supper at the Embassy which inaugurated the entering for the conference delegates in Havana. Besides having lived in Washington when Mr. Messersmith was en poste at the State Department between his various foreign assignments—notably when he was Assistant Secretary of State before being made Ambassador to Cuba—both of the Messersmiths have connections with nearby Delaware. Their many friends at and near Rehoboth are enchanted at seeing their pictures and reading about them in the news of the conference. Mrs. Messersmith is the former Marion Mustard, of Lewes, Del., that attractive old town which dates from the early days of the Dutch settlers, and which is only seven miles from Rehoboth. It was in Lewes, when Mr. Messersmith was principal of a school, that he met and married the present chatelaine of the United States Embassy in Havana.

MRS. ROOSEVELT is a very humane person and recently it has come to my notice that she is human as well. This last fact sometimes seems in doubt, when one reads in the daily papers of her superhuman activities. From now on the First Lady is a person just like the rest of us. She is afraid of something. The secret leaked out in the following manner.

The other day a very distinguished lady, an intimate friend of Mrs. Roosevelt, was sitting beside a swimming pool watching some children who were diving into the pool with more courage than skill.

Suddenly Mrs. Roosevelt's friend turned to her companion and said, "Mrs. Roosevelt swims like a fish but she just cannot dive. It simply scares the life out of her."

Norway's Envoy To Hear Flagstad

The Norwegian Minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, will attend the concert at the Watergate tonight when the Wagnerian soprano, Kirsten Flagstad, will appear. She is to sing with the National Symphony Orchestra in an all-Wagner concert directed by Edwin McArthur.

Many other representations of diplomatic and social circles will be present at tonight's Sunset Symphony. Expected are the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Harold A. Brooks, chairman of the summer concerts committee; Mrs. Brooks, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mr. and Mrs. Milton W. King, Col. and Mrs. C. C. Schiffeler, Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Carleton Smith, magazine music critic, who will be here for the event; Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson and Gen. and Mrs. Barton K. Yount.

Mrs. McArthur, wife of the young guest conductor, will also be in the audience. Mme. Flagstad will sing "Elsa's Dream," from "Lohengrin;" "Dich Theure Halle," from "Tannhauser; "Vorspiel" and "Liebestod," from "Tristan and Isolde," and Brunnhilde's immolation scene from "Gotterdaemmerung."

Madame Chairman

FREAK WEATHER discouraged members of the Bethesda Woman's Club in their plans to present a circus with sideshow freaks at their open house yesterday morning. The prospect of wearing pads and pillows as the "strong woman" and of standing in a box and having one's arms bound to one's side as "the armless and legless wonder" became less and less alluring as the mercury climbed toward the 100 mark.

Arrangements for the program, outlined during the earlier and cooler part of the season, were altered in haste last week by Mrs. Leonard Nicholson, former president of the club, who was chairman of entertainment. Instead of sideshows which entailed ponderous make-up, it was decided to have a schoolroom with a "geography lesson" for diversion.

Mrs. Nicholson presided as the teacher and was greeted with the lusty singing of "Good Morning to You." Mrs. Robert Leopold and Mrs. E. P. DiBlasi, staging an English hunting scene, came galloping in astride broomsticks and wearing pink jackets (which were not so cool either).

Mrs. Frank Bennett and Mrs. Richard Nevius, in costume of strolling accordionists, represented Italy.

Mrs. John Huber, who was to have been the armless and legless woman, was turned out instead as a Hula dancer, representing Hawaii. She thought the grass skirt would be cooler.

Mrs. Peter Decker was heard in the role of an American prima donna, just returned from France. There was also a Maryland tobacco auction in which Mrs. Jack Irwin, Mrs. Bennett and Mrs. Leopold portrayed the farmers.

The only serious note in the program was book review of "Trees" by Mrs. Jacob Bulger, club president.

Luncheon was served at 12:30, followed by bridge.

The affair, attended by about 40 members of the club, was held in the clubhouse, Sonoma and Old Georgetown road.

YEARBOOK COMING OUT—The Columbia Heights Art Club next season will study Mexico. It's yearbook, now on the press, outlines a variety of topics for its fortnightly meetings which are held at the homes of members. The primitive and modern culture and civilization of Mexico will be covered by the papers read by women of the group. Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist is program chairman.

The club, founded in 1899, celebrated its fortieth anniversary last spring. It has a membership limited to 30.

The first fall meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. M. H. Fohrman, 8 Pine street, College Heights, Md., with Mrs. Charles K. Hoover, assistant hostess.

The yearbook committee comprises the executive board of the club, headed by Mrs. Robert Hibben, the president. Others include Mrs. John E. Briggs, vice president; Mrs. Hoover, recording secretary; Mrs. Anton Heitmuller, Mrs. Gilchrist, Mrs. Audley Smith and Mrs. William T. Gill.

CONVENTION NOTES—Mrs. Arthur D. Condon will speak this morning before the summer study group of the Woman's National Democratic Club at 11 o'clock, in the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire avenue. She was the only woman delegate from the District attending the convention and will give "Impressions from the Floor." Mrs. Hale T. Shenefield will preside at the meeting.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

AUGUST MEANS Saratoga to the hunt country, and many are already making plans to visit that famous spa to buy or sell horses or just look on.

Colin ("Sandy") MacLeod, jr., of Middleburg, left by motor on Monday for Saratoga Springs after shipping nine yearlings by van the day before from his Middleburg estate, Huntland. He has joined his parents, Mr. and Mrs. MacLeod, of Boston. They have taken a house for August and will have several horses in training there.

• • • •

MR. MacLEOD'S yearlings will be sold the first night of the famous Saratoga yearling sales, beginning Friday. He has a grand lot of yearling thoroughbreds and is justly proud of them all.

The two he thinks outstanding are a bay colt, No. 14 in the catalogue, by Imp. Quatre Bras II, out of Sister Ship, a Man o' War mare; and a bay colt, No. 16 in the catalogue, by Imp. Belfonds-Home Time, a High Time mare.

Another good one is a gray filly by Imp. Belfonds-Imp. Star of Thule. Others of Sandy's yearlings include a bay fill by Imp. Belfonds-Imp. Litany, brown colt, by Agrarian; Movie Lass, bay filly, by Imp. Quatre Bras II; and Beauty Starby Sweep, gray filly by Imp. Belfonds-Whim, a Broomstick mare.

SANDY'S VIRGINIA friends visited his stables continually this past week to look over his yearlings, and they are wishing him much luck on Friday evening when they go on the block.

Other Virginia yearlings sent to Saratoga for the first-night sale are from the stable of A. S. Hewitt, of Boyce, who will sell seven good ones. Herring Bros., of Harrisonburg, Va., are selling six, and Charles V. B. Cushman, of Upperville, has sent three. Mr. Cushman, by the way, is famous for having paid the highest price ever given for a yearling at Saratoga or in America, when one season he bid $75,000 on a yearling which was knocked down to him.

T. Beatty Brown, of Upperville, will sell five yearlings on Friday and Dr. E. B. Miller will put up three that evening. Charles W. Williams will put up five and L. A. Moseley, who has the largest that night, 14.

SARATOGA, for 11 months of the year a peaceful little town of about 12,000 people, is a booming place now for the racing season began on Monday. Overnight it has grown to a city of 50,000.

If you have ever been there the day before the races start, you know how exciting it is to see it grow. High powered cars pour in, filled with celebrities and well-known sportsmen, cars of every kind and make, bringing people from all walks of life and horses from all over the land.

Hotels are crowded, beautiful houses opened up, boarding houses and private homes overflowing, and the otherwise quiet, shady streets a sea of humanity. But, following the last day of racing, you wonder how everyone can get away from town so quickly.

THERE ARE many other beautiful tracks in the country, but none has ever taken the place of Saratoga, which was started between 55 and 75 years ago. It draws the most enthusiastic race fans of any track in America.

There is little time for anything but horses. Early in the morning, at 5 or 6 o'clock, you go out to see your favorite horse work, and often have breakfast at the track. Later an early luncheon, and on to the races. The setting is exceptionally beautiful, with large trees on the beautiful green lawn, which is also the paddock, and the bright blooming flowers of every kind.

George Bull, of New York, president of the Saratoga Racing Association, leaves nothing undone and everything is in perfect readiness when the racing season begins.

The yearling sales, which begin Friday night, are to me just as fascinating as the races. An early dinner and you hurry to see the first horse put on the block. Some come to bid seriously and others just to look on. They wear their best bib and tucker, for from the sales everybody generally goes on to a party or night club.

I will tell you from time to time during August of the people from the hunt country who are at Saratoga.

'Act of Havana' May Affect Martinique Status, Says Welles

Emergency Would Be Created if France Became Fascist Dependency Of Germany, Declares Hull Aide

By the Associated Press

The Government took the position yesterday that if France became a Fascist dependency of Germany an emergency would be created which would require the American nations to take over administration of French possessions in this hemisphere.

Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, outlined this position in response to press conference questions as to the effect of the newly signed Havana agreements on the French island of Martinique, in the West Indies.

Trouble over Martinique has been threatening since France capitulated. British warships have been reported cruising near the island to prevent the French aircraft carrier Bearn from leaving with a cargo of American-made airplanes ordered by the Anglo-French purchasing commission before France fell. The United States has ben negotiating with the French and British in an effort to bring about a peaceful solution of the dispute over the planes.

Reporters questioned Welles as to what would be regarded as a change of sovereignty under the "Act of Havana," which provides for the establishment of provisional administrations in European possessions in this hemisphere when they are threatened with a change of sovereignty.

What was in mind, Welles said, was that circumstances might arise where a free and independent government became no longer free and independent and might be operating under duress. That situation, he continued, would create one of the emergencies of the type foreseen in the Havana agreements.

Asked whether such a situation would be created if France became a Fascist dependency of Germany, the Secretary said that it would.

He declined, however, to say what he considered the present status of France to be.

Welles was questioned regarding the status of the Dutch West Indies under the Havana agreements. The agreements would effect contingently every European-held possession in the Western Hemisphere, he replied. He pointed out, however, that the government of invaded Holland was operating freely in London, and that British troops which had landed in the Dutch West Indies were under the control and order of the Dutch governor general.

Admiral Wood Dies in Hospital At New York

District Resident Taken Ill on Vacation At Jamestown, R. I.

Rear Admiral Spencer Shepard Wood, 78, retired, wartime commandant of the First Naval District, Boston, died yesterday in a New York City hospital.

A resident of 2808 N street northwest here, he was spending the summer at Jamestown, R. I., where he was taken ill.

Funeral services will be held here Friday at Christ Episcopal Church, 3100 O street northwest, at an hour to be determined. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Admiral Wood, who during a 39-year naval career served also as aid to Admiral George Dewey, aid to Navy Secretary H. A. Herbert and member of the General Board, commanded the First Naval District from January, 1918, until April, 1919.

Native of Brooklyn

Following the war Admiral Wood hoisted his flag on the U. S. S. Chicago as commander of Division 1, Pacific Fleet, and assisted in the protection of United States citizens during a revolution in Honduras.

A native of Brooklyn, N. Y., Admiral Wood was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1882, was promoted through the ranks to rear admiral October 15, 1917. He retired December 19, 1921.

While flag secretary to Rear Admiral J. S. Walker in 1894 he was sent by President Cleveland to investigate conditions in the Hawaiian Islands prior to the recognition of the Hawaiian Republic by the United States.

In 1898 he was commanding officer of the U. S. S. Dupont, employed in carrying dispatches. Among them was the order to the U. S. S. Maine to proceed to Cuba.

Was Member of General Board

While aide to Admiral Dewey in 1903, he assisted in the formation of the Navy Relief Society, to provide relief for dependents of deceased Navy and Marine Corps men, and continued to serve as secretary-treasurer of the organization until his death.

Admiral Wood was a member of the General Board from 1914, when he completed the Naval War College course, until 1917. From October, 1920, until his retirement he was president of the Naval Examining and Retiring Board. He commanded several battleships during his career. He was awarded the Navy Cross.

He leaves two daughters, Mrs. J. H. N. Potter and Mrs. Joseph Harsch, of Washington; a brother, John Wardell Wood, of Geneva, N. Y., and a sister, Mrs. Arthur Ayrault, of Jamestown, R. I.

U. S. to Ask Aliens About Foreign Ties

15 Questions Include One On 'Activities'

More than 3,500,000 aliens in the United States soon will be required to tell the Federal Government if in the last five years they have been "affiliated with or active in" organizations serving foreign nations.

A question intended to illicit voluntary revelation of alien connections has been included in a questionnaire to be returned by noncitizens starting August 27, Earl G. Harrison, director of administration of the alien registration act, disclosed yesterday.

Another of the 15 questions included in registration forms to be ready for distribution August 15 asks the alien to list his "activities" for the last five years. A third requires him to reveal if he has been arrested, indicted or convicted of any offense, except minor traffic infractions.

Organizations serving foreign nations are described in the questionnaire as those "devoted in whole or in part to influencing or furthering the political activities, public relations, or public policy of a foreign government."

The question covering "activities" asks the alien to list, "in addition to other information," his "memberships or activities in clubs, organizations, or societies."

Harrison, a Philadelphia lawyer named three weeks ago to handle an admittedly "tough" assignment, explained procedures evolved for registering aliens at a press conference yesterday in the office of Solicitor General Francis Biddle.

Five and a half million sample forms will be ready for distribution to aliens through postoffices by August 15.

Registration must be made between August 27 and December 25 at 7,300 first and second class postoffices or seats of county governments where the official forms will be filled out under oath and where aliens over 14 will be fingerprinted.

Harrison emphasized that in no case will aliens be charged a fee for registering or fingerprinting. He made the statement in connection with reports of registration "rackets" already cropping up in New Jersey, where persons advertising as "authorized" to register have been charging aliens as much as $25 for fingerprinting.

Criminal records reported will be checked against criminal files of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Biddle said, pointing out that "one of the purposes of the act is to check into criminal pasts of aliens."

All aliens are required to register, including visitors in this country for as long as 30 days and those who arrive after the effective date of the act. Failure to comply carries a fine of $1,000 and six months in jail. The same penalties are provided for false statements, knowingly made.

Disagreement Over Calculating Tax Delays Excess Profits Bill

Disagreement between experts of the Treasury Department and the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation over the basis for calculating excess profits taxes was understood yesterday to be a factor holding up the advance of the projected tax bill.

The Treasury is proposing that excess profits be determined by a formula combining yield on invested capital with average earnings for a period of years, as reported in The Post yesterday.

On the other hand, the Congressional experts are understood to be arguing that prior average earnings are the only proper measuring rod for deciding whether present profits are "excess." It is reported, however, that a compromise plan has been offered whereby the taxpayer would be allowed to choose between the alternatives of basing his excess profits tax on prior earnings alone or on invested capital alone.

The Treasury formula, combining the two methods, say its opponents, would result in the application of come of corporations that normally produce a large return on capital investment. Thus, they say, the proposed tax would hit not merely "excess" profits, but also high normal profits. They argue that real excess profits are those profits which exceed the normal level, and therefore should be determined simply by comparing present income with prior average income.

Members of the tax subcommittees of the Senate Finance and House Ways and Means committees met yesterday morning with Treasury and Congressional experts, and then the House members held another meeting in the afternoon. Observed one member: "This afternoon we had a general discussion that ended nowhere."

However, Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, predicted there would be "some concrete action this week."

Peacetime Draft Opposed in Poll Of 'Typical Block'

More than half of the persons voted "no" on the question, "Is universal military conscription in peacetime desirable?" in a public opinion poll in a "typical block in Southeast Washington," it was announced yesterday by the East Washington Peace Club.

In the block between Sixth and Seventh streets on South Carolina avenue and E street southeast, members of the club polled 80 persons, white and colored.

A tally showed 43.7 per cent replied favorably and 56.3 per cent negatively.

"Many disapproved it on the grounds that it was undemocratic and smacked of the methods of tyranny used 'over there,'" said Robert Klaber, who announced the results.

Treasuries Caught Short by 'Total' War

The Treasury announced yesterday that only $46,473,000 was sent by foreign governments to the United States in the four weeks ended May 1 before "total" war broke out in Europe. This, the Treasury said, was an indication that none of the warring powers "have expected an early beginning of lightning hostilities."

The Treasury said short-term banking funds increased during this period by $35,196,000, net foreign purchases were $2,226,000 in American securities, and $9,524,000 in foreign securities held in the United States were repatriated.

In the preceding five-week period, the Treasury said, new capital inflow totaled $72,089,000, and for the eight months ended May 1, $185,310,000.

Mrs. Kerans, Clubwoman, Dies of Heat

Funeral Services To Be Tomorrow; District Resident

Mrs. Izabella Kitchell Kerans, 64, a resident of Washington for the last 20 years, residing at 1305 Kennedy street northwest, died early yesterday at Sibley Hospital, a victim of heat prostration.

MRS. KERANS

Mrs. Kerans was the wife of E. Grattan Kerans, of the Department of Commerce, and mother of Mrs. Helen Montague, J. Mark Kerans and Dr. E. Grattan Kerans, of Washington, and J. Norton Johnson, of Arlington, Va. She also is survived by a brother, Ernest Brace Kitchell, of St. Louis and Estes Park, Colo., two grandsons, four granddaughters and one great granddaughter.

She was born in Rolla, Mo., May 8, 1876, and educated in the public schools of St. Louis, where she remained until coming to Washington in 1920.

For many years Mrs. Kerans had been active in the affairs of various civic, patriotic and political women's organizations here. She was a member of the board of directors of the Women's City Club, former regent of Our Flag Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, former president and charter member of Women's Democratic Educational Council of Washington, former State president of the Daughters of Founders and Patriots, a member of the Society of Colonial Daughters of the Seventeenth Century, Women's National Democratic Club, and Society for National Capital Memorial of Thomas Jefferson.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Willard T. Huntemann funeral home, 5732 Georgia avenue northwest, with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

DANCING MASTERS' CHOICE. The topsy-turvy dance being done by Daniels and Day at the Lotus was awarded first prize in the novelty class by the Dancing Masters of America at their convention at the Hotel Astor in New York. The number is called "High as a Kite," or something like that. You get the idea. . . . Bill Strickland, Lotus emcee, maestro and greeter, celebrated his twenty-first wedding anniversary yesterday. His better half, pretty Margaret Strickland, broke off her South Carolina vacation and came rushing back to town for the party. The adjoining picture shows Bill's expression as he greeted her. "Gosh, I'm tired of being a bachelor," he said.

BILL STRICKLAND, Lotus' emcee-maestro, celebrated his twenty-first wedding anniversary yesterday

FISHING TRIP EXTRAORDINARY. Peter Borras, Madrillon's host, and Ramon Lurba, owner of the Neptune Room, are going on a fishing trip. Senor Borras will do the cooking and Senor Lurba will wash the dishes. But who'll do the fishing is something we can't find out.

ALL IN FUN. Mayfair. "Mousey" Garner continues as the battiest comic around town. They say his brother Frankie dropped him on his head at the age of two weeks. (Or was it the other way around?) "Mousey" can sing like Jimmy Savo, of Rochester, as the mood hits him, but he's funniest when he sings like "Mousey."

Maryland Gardens. Yvonne Logan, the roly-poly but beautiful mistress of ceremonies, gets the customers in stitches with her clowning gymnastics. They laugh with her and at her. And her "Mountain Music" is a hillbilly killer-diller.

Del Rio. Pianist-singer Jack Wells talks part of his songs, sings the rest. The effect is paralyzing, especially in such torchies as "I Can't Love You Any More." True love takes a ribbing.

Starlight Roof. Saxophonist Jim Duff is having spells of singing, often chooses "Ferdinand the Bull" for a fast six rounds. His "Ferdinand" is one that really rates a sheaf of sweet posies.

River Bend. Lee Maso has made an arrangement of "The Girl With the Light Blue Hair" that's the last word in comical rhythm. If Lee's sense of humor didn't run to rhythm he'd probably be writing vaudeville gags.

SHOREHAM TERRACE REUNION. All the acts on the Shoreham Terrace are old friends. The Hazel Mangean Girl played with the Five Jansleys at Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe and with dancers St. Clair and Day on the Italian Riviera.

WILLARD ROOF - THEATER. The Willard Roof opens this evening as a grand combination of theater and roof garden. The Willard Roof Players will offer the courtroom drama, "The Night of January 16," to an audience that may sit at tables and sip as they enjoy the show. The production is under the direction of Bess Davis Schreiner (Theater Guild) and will run for several weeks.

PERSONAL TO PETE MACIAS: Where is that picture of you in your sailor-boy suit? Last time we were in the Lounge Riviera you said you'd send it right down . . . Dear Public: Do watch for this wonderful chromo. Pete as a sailor makes Pop-Eye look like a sissy.

ENCORES AND COMMUNITY SINGS. Mayflower Lounge. The patrons are always asking for the "Man Who Comes Around." Principally because of all those cuhrazy extra verses to it composed by the Mayflower's own "Ha-cha" Gardner.

Anchor Room. The Irish business men who favor the Anchor Room are always asking for "Irish Eyes." The big idea seems to be that they want to sing it themselves.

King Cole Room. Linda Carroll's versions of such oldies as "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes" and "Night and Day" are so thr-rilling that they are customers' "must" items every evening.

New Bavarian. Songs favored in the nightly community sings at the New Bavarian are "Wagon Wheels," "Home on the Range" and various college songs, with "God Bless America" coming in for the most rousing rendition of the evening.

KAIN PICKER. Dave McWilliams, who led his band at Glen Echo for six seasons, a real long-distance record, is the man whose recommendation placed Paul Kain's orchestra in Echo's Spanish Ballroom this summer. . . . Dave happened along while the Glen Echo management was doing some heavy figuring on this season's band. "Kain is the man for you," he said. And how right he was!

ROAMIN' IN THE GLOAMIN'. The Rustic Cabin out Bladensburg way is a real cabin on the outside, but strictly 1940 when you get inside. Fine music on a modernistic novachord, latest development in musical instruments and streamlined and potent beverages. . . . The big plate of Virginia appetizers preceding the "plantation dinner" at O'Donnell's Farms is a meal in itself. Be careful to save room for the fried chicken. . . . Rodd Raffell's 14-piece orchestra at the Nightingale is one of the best, as well as biggest in all the country-side.

Officials Formulate 5-Year Plan for D. C.

Department Heads Asked to Submit List of Needs

District officials yesterday began drafting a 5-year program of improvements for the city's governmental facilities. Total cost of the proposed changes may reach $80,000,000.

Three officials, Maj. B. C. Snow, assistant engineer commissioner; Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor; and J. B. Gordon, director of sanitary engineering, were named the committee to prepare the program.

Heads of municipal departments were instructed to submit recommendations for building requirements, including major repairs and renovation of existing buildings and other permanent needs, not later than September 15 for the five fiscal years beginning with 1941.

Rated on Urgency

They were asked to arrange the recommendations according to the improvements considered "urgent," "Necessary but not urgent" and "desirable but not necessary."

Many department heads have already been at work on their respective programs. It is known one head will ask for consideration of a municipally-operated sand and gravel plant at Buzzard Point.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland is expected to recommend building of at least three more health centers. He now has one and a site for a second.

It is also expected the Commissioners will include a recommendation for completion of the Municipal Center. The first unit, the East Administration Building, will be ready late this fall.

Might Cost $15,000,000

Similar improvement plans have been designed by District officials, but no definite action was ever taken by Congress in appropriating funds. The appropriating bodies of both the House and Senate District committees this year, however, instructed the Commissioners to work out this plan, indicating they plan to follow a definite procedure on Capital improvements in future years.

The welfare department has long desired a receiving home and general overhauling of the antequated buildings at the Home for the Aged and Infirm. These two items are certain to find a prominent spot in the welfare department's program.

On the basis of figures contained in previous programs it has been estimated that one year's program would run in the neighborhood of $15,000,000.

'Art and Prudence' Staged Tonight By C. U. Players

A WORLD PREMIERE—First showing of "Art and Prudence," a satire on drama schools, written by Walter Kerr, will be staged tonight at Catholic University by the Speech and Drama Department. Lieut. Moore Is Named Fire Captain

Sergt. R. L. Lynch Made Lieutenant, Private Walter Watt Becomes Sergeant

Lieut. John R. Moore, 52, commended for his heroic work in the Knickerbocker disaster and Kann's warehouse blaze, was promoted yesterday to captain by the District Commissioners.

He will take command of No. 8 truck company, succeeding Capt. R. D. White, recently retired by the Fire Department.

Sergt R. L. Lynch, 42, with the department 16 years and a former McKinley High School student, was promoted to lieutenant, and Private Walter Watt was named a sergeant. A rookie, Robert Burns, was made a private.

The men will be sworn in today.

Lieut. Moore was appointed to the force in 1911, made a sergeant 15 years later and a lieutenant in 1930. He received the blue ribbon award for his Knickerbocker disaster work. For a number of years he was manager of the Fire Department baseball team, which clashed every Labor Day with the Police Department in a benefit game. He lives at 81 New York avenue northwest, with his wife.

Sergt. Lynch, father of nine children, lives in Riverdale, Md. He entered the department in 1924 and was made a sergeant in 1933. At present he is assigned to No. 4 Truck Company.

The Commissioners also granted Sergt. W. J. Bunton and Private M. C. Fairall additional compensation of $5 a month, in recognition of efficiency.

Potomac Savings Receiver Declares 5% Dividend

Justus S. Wardell, receiver for the Potomac Savings Bank, yesterday announced a 5 per cent dividend will be paid to depositors of the closed institution beginning today.

Creditors will be notified by postcard as to the date they are to appear for their dividends at the receiver's office, 1614 K street northwest, Wardell declared. The distribution of $100,963.70 will bring to 75½ the percentage paid to depositors of the bank, closed March 6, 1933.

Wardell reminded claimants to bring their receiver's certificates with them. In cases where these have been lost or destroyed, written security will be accepted by the receiver's office.

Although this is the fourth dividend declared, $11,000 still remains uncalled for from previous allotments, the receiver said.

Now Tommy Knows How a Nickelodeon Feels

HE'LL BE CAREFUL NEXT TIME—Three-year-old Thomas Pheasant, of 1725 B street southeast, has probably profited by his experience of last night. "Tommy" swallowed a nickel, left on a dressing table by his sister, Betty Lou, 14. All is well, now, for Dr. A. J. Nicolette, chief eye, ear, nose and throat resident at Gallinger Hospital, got the nickel back with an esophaguscope, an instrument used in removing foreign bodies from the upper esophagus—a rather rare operation. Ether was administered. The boy, son of Max Pheasant, Navy Yard worker, was none the worse for the ordeal when this picture was made in his home.

Inspection Chief's Job Is Abolished

Commission Decides To Put Control Of Work Under Building Inspector

The post of director of inspection in the District government was abolished yesterday and the duties were turned over to the building inspector, Col. John W. Oehmann, by the District Commissioners.

The job has been held for the past seven years by Capt. Hugh P. Oram, who resigned recently because of ill health.

Col. Oehmann in his new capacity, will not act on matters relating to zoning, as did Capt. Oram. Some of Col. Oehmann's decisions as building inspector are reviewed by the Board of Zoning Adjustment, and it was felt this would not permit him to sit with the board.

The inspection post carried with it a salary of $7,000, which Col. Oehmann hopes will be used in the hire of additional inspectors.

The commissioners ruled effective tomorrow that the offices of inspection of plumbing, of gas fitting and refrigeration, of electrical inspection and of the Board of Examiners for Steam Engineers should be consolidated with the office of building inspector.

Man Sentenced 5 to 15 Years In Assault Case

Richard Chase, colored, 29-year-old subject of a six-year police record here, was sentenced in the District Court yesterday to serve 5 to 15 years in prison for trying to assault a young woman in Anacostia July 7.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough sentenced the man immediately after he was convicted. "This is a vicious crime," said the justice. "There is too much of this sort of thing. It must be stopped." He gave Chase the limit sentence.

Chase claimed he was not the man who seized the young woman, who fought free after five minutes of tussling.

The jurors deliberated only 15 minutes before reaching their guilty verdict.

Chase has been arrested eight times since 1934, including four arrests for assault. One assault was upon a little girl.

1,400 Brave Rain to See Virtue Triumph at Sylvan Theater

For a little while last night, a sprinkling of rain threatened to interrupt the Vicar of Wakefield's wife's maneuverings to marry off her daughters to men of high station.

But the crowd at the summer festival program at the Sylvan Theater temporarily hoisted umbrellas and newspapers. And the troupers of East Washington Community Center saw to it that virtue triumphed again and that the villany of one suitor was thwarted, while the raindrops also were routed.

Walter Kerr's dramatization of Oliver Goldsmith's novel, "The Vicar of Wakefield," was presented by an assorted cast of 17 members.

Pat Blake, a clerk in the Navy Department, not only directed the play but appeared as Squire Thornhill, the unscrupulous suitor. Ernest N. Johnson, a meat salesman, took the role of the philosophical austere vicar, Charles Primrose.

Ted Freter, who is a Civil Service classification coder, not only applied the make-up to fellow actors but appeared in two roles of his own—as Cousin Edward from London and later as a jailer.

A family group formed an acting team—with Mrs. Carolyn Rogers portraying the Vicar's wife and with her own son, William, appearing as her stage-son, Moses. Her daughter, Margaret Rogers, took the role of a neighbor farmer's daughter.

About 1,400 persons gathered on the Monument grounds for the performance which was preceded by a concert by the Elks Boy's Band.

Ex-Messenger's Illness Saddens Capitol

Harry Parker, who is as familiar a figure on Capitol Hill as many venerable legislators, won't be visting his old friends for some time now.

PARKER

The aged colored messenger, who, for almost 50 years, was messenger for House Ways and Means Committee, is seriously ill of a diabetic gangrene infection of the right foot.

Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, arranged for Harry to be sent to a hospital when he learned of his illness.

Three years ago the House by a unanimous vote of 340 to 0 gave Harry a pension of $130 a month after Chairman Warren of the Accounts Committee explained that Harry was tired and that his feet hurt.

Nevertheless, Harry, who, until last January, had never missed an opening of Congress for 67 years, has been a frequent visitor at the Capitol.

Dr. T. Edward Jones, director in chief at Freedmen's Hospital, said that Harry is in his customary cheerful mood despite his illness. He said that it was likely that Harry's foot and possibly his leg will have to be amputated.

Harry is reputed to have been the last child born at Mount Vernon, where his paternal grandfather was a personal servant of George Washington. He doesn't know his age, but he recalls that he came to Washington about 66 years ago and got his first job through William McKinley, then a Representative.

Four Imperiled As Walls Collapse In Alley Homes

The rear walls of two houses in Temperance court, an alley of colored dwellings behind the 1900 block of Twelfth street northwest, collapsed yesterday afternoon.

Bricks spilled into the simlins, apples and potatoes on Mrs. Beulah James' store at 1924 Temperance court, but no one was injured. The kitchen of the adjoining house, 1920, was unoccupied when the wall collapsed.

Mrs. James had just left the stove when the bricks fell, with a loud crash. Three children, the oldest, aged 2, were playing in front of the house at 1926.

A dog, sleeping behind the houses, was pinned in by the bricks and emitted loud yelps until he was extricated.

Jury Indicts Chauffeur, 53, In Wife Killing

Presentment Is One Of 32 Handed Up to Justice Goldsborough

Charles Henry Thomas, 53, colored, a chauffeur, was indicted in the District Court yesterday on a charge of second-degree murder in the death of his wife of a pistol wound she suffered July 4.

Before her death at Gallinger Hospital July 8, Mrs. Chase made a will leaving her husband only $5 of her $7,500 estate. The remainder went to relatives. She worked at the Government Printing Office for 20 years.

Chase was alleged to have shot his wife in a quarrel at 1018 Howard road southeast. The indictment against him was one of 32, which accused 25 persons, handed up to Justice T. Alan Goldsborough.

McArthur Arrives in Capital, Shatters a Few Shibboleths

Too Many Maestros 'Snooty' About Music, Singer's Protege Says

EDWIN McARTHUR
"Star-Spangled Batonist"

Edwin McArthur, who shatters musical shibboleths every time he opens his mouth, breezed into the Capital last night. This evening he will conduct the National Symphony Orchestra in an all-Wagnerian concert, featuring Mme. Kirsten Flagstad, and last night he warmed up with some provocative observations:

Music schools pamper their students too much, failing to prepare them to exploit their careers commercially.

America is prejudiced against its own composers.

Luck, more politely known as opportunity, is as important as talent, if not more so, to the ambitious musician or conductor.

Too many conductors are "snooty" about symphonic music, assuming a holier-than-thou attitude.

Iconoclast at 32

The above are a few of the iconoclastic remarks made with fervor by the 32-year-old protege of Mme. Flagstad. Nor does he care who knows it.

Probably no one quite like Edwin McArthur had crossed the scene until he came along. Born in Denver to a clergyman and a school teacher, he was a skilled organist at 12, but when he reached manhood it appeared he would become a stenographer he was such a skilled typist (State champion of Colorado).

But music was his goal, so he went to New York, spent several years marking time—though making a living—as an accompanist. When Flagstad made her American debut a little more than five years ago, McArthur heard her and was so impressed he wrote her a fan note.

She replied, asking him to come up for an interview. He has been her accompanist or conductor ever since. When he went to Australia a few years ago as the prima donna's accompanist and she told the sponsors she wished McArthur to be her conductor in "Gotterdammerung," they asked him what he'd conducted.

Kept His Fingers Crossed

"Oh," he replied without a tremor, "I've conducted for WPA—that's the government, you know—and NYA."

They were much impressed and he was accepted. Not until he mounted the podium, however, did he uncross his fingers.

Paint Company Employe Burned

Raymond Johnson, 32, an employe of the American Paint Co., 1112 O street southeast, was burned seriously yesterday when a gum-composition he was mixing burst into flame and ignited his clothes, police reported. Johnson was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Capital News In Brief

Great Dane Dog, Master Reunited

The Great Dane who waited in lonely anticipation at the Animal Rescue League since Sunday, found his master again yesterday.

P. L. Breton, 2230 Decatur place northwest, brought to the league headquarters a large picture which just matched the dog. He had read in a Washington paper that the dog had been taken to the league. It was straying on Calvert street near the bridge when police picked it up.

Bottle Thrower Misses Target

Frederick G. Frost, a Government employe, would like to have it known that whoever threw that bottle at him is no gentleman—or lady.

Frost, according to a letter he wrote The Post yesterday, was seated in the living room of his apartment at 1701 Sixteenth street northwest Monday night when a half-pint milk bottle crashed through a screen door nearby.

The intended victim told police he suspected the anonymous person who had telephoned him 45 minutes earlier to complain that Frost's reading lamp was keeping him awake.

Gets 5 to 15 Days For Manslaughter

James Melvin, 59, colored, yesterday was sentenced to from 5 to 15 days for the death of his roommate, John Hines, 46, colored, in a fall at their home, 1250 Fourth street southwest.

A scuffle occurred when the men quarreled over some money and Hines was flung over a bannister, falling nine feet to a concrete pavement and suffering a skull fracture. After Assistant District Attorney William Hitz, jr., completed the Government's case Monday, Melvin pleaded guilty to manslaughter and Justice T. Alan Goldsborough imposed the sentence.

Today's Last Day To Buy Fido's Tag

Today is positively the last day to file a return on personal property and purchase a $2 tag for Fido and still escape municipal penalties.

In the case of the returns, late filings must contain a 20 per cent penalty. In case of poor Fido, he'll just be picked up by the poundmaster, which isn't so bad. There is a danger, however, someone will claim the pup or he will be sent to the happy hunting grounds.

Tax Collector Chatham Towers said yesterday some 10,000 dogs are still without the 1941 tags.

Truckman Hurt as He Steps in Trolley's Path

Stepping from a truck into the path of a street car, George Murill, colored, 23, of 1045 Westford place northeast, was critically injured yesterday in front of 405 Seventh street southwest. He was taken to Freedmen's Hospital with a fractured pelvis.

Griggs to Join London Staff Of the Red Cross

Northam Lee Griggs, a New Yorker, formerly with the diplomatic service, will leave for London today by plane to join the American Red Cross commitee which is distributing war relief supplies in England.

The American Red Cross announced Griggs will report to David K. E. Bruce and Daniel Grant in London. The new emissary formerly was attache in the American embassies at Havana and Rio de Janeiro.

Richard Allen, Red Cross delegate in Marseilles, cabled yesterday that 245 carloads of foodstuffs, clothing and medicines sent from the United States on the mercy ship McKeesport are being distributed in the unoccupied French zone. American Red Cross representatives are supervising the work.

These representatives, according to Allen, had "independent action in nonoccupied France which is extraordinary. I can see no possibility in the immediate future of any interference from any source."

Allen urged early shipment of additional supplies, particularly food and clothing, emphasizing that the first need is for quantities of sweetened canned milk for infants and small children.

Young to Lead Singing Tonight Of 'My Washington'

District Commissioner J. Russell Young will lead group singing of "Washington, My Washington" at the song's first presentation before a Capital audience tonight.

The occasion will be the opening of the Willard Roof Tavern, where the number will be presented by George H. O'Connor, Washington's singer for Presidents "from Roosevelt to Roosevelt." The song was written by John J. Daly, Washington newspaperman, and introduced during District Day ceremonies at the San Francisco World's Fair July 12.

Standing Room Only at Greenbelt

Signs of the (hot) times:

Greenbelt swimming pool became so crowded yesterday officials put up "Standing Room Only" signs.

Prince Georges County Sanitary Commission reported that residents of the area consumed more than 13,000,000 gallons of water yesterday, twice the normal amount.

'The Boys From Syracuse' Are the Goofiest Yet!

Shakespeare Comes to Screen by Devious Route; A Prize Vacation Trip for the Lovelorn; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THOSE OLDSTERS of the theater who remember the treadmill chariot race in "Ben Hur" as the ultimate spasm in thundering excitement "ain't seen nuthin' yet," as Al Jolson would say, until they have viewed the closing sequences in Universal's picturization of George Abbott's successful stage musical, "The Boys From Syracuse." There are more four-horse, two-wheeled roadsters in this cross-country climax, on the outskirts of Ephesus, than the Nazis had tanks in France. And they go faster and mow down almost as many victims!

BELL

I stumbled across this revelation when Manager Hardie Metkin, of R.-K.-O.-Keith's was atempting to filch a private squint at his next attraction, at an hour when all reputable citizens should have been stretched out at Hains Point trying to cheat the temperature out of a wink of sleep.

"The Boys From Syracuse" is a novel burlesque—as everybody must know by now—in which modern domestic, municipal and State problems are translated into terms of ancient Greece. It gets off to none too speedy a start, but finishes in a tumult of action that redeems its earlier lethargy. It is, of course, a fantastic musical adaptation of Will Shakespeare's goofy farce of "A Comedy of Errors," with its twin Antipholi—or Antipholuses, if that comes easier—and Dromios. If Mr. Shakespeare was balmy when he wrote this little number, Leonard Spigelglass, Charles Grayson and Paul Gerard Smith were in the violent ward when they adapted it to the screen, from the stage script by George Abbott, with music by Rodgers and Hart.

When the two sets of twins and their various wives and sweethearts get together to compose the confusion into which their lives have been thrown, there is some of the cleverest double-exposure photography ever brought to the screen. Allan Jones' duet with himself in the singing contest that closes the action is as baffling as anything you have ever seen or heard. I understand something of the intricate business of double-exposure scenes, but how they "double-expose" a sound track is something else again.

If keen political satire is what you have been waiting for—barring the national conventions, of course—you will get a load of it in this toga-draped tomfoolery.

Washington ought to be particularly interested in "The Boys From Syracuse," because it is the first production of Jules Levy, former practitioner of the motion picture business in this city. Long a local fixture on "Film Row," Jules went on to high executive positions on both coasts and now has branched out as a producer, backing his judgment with his own dough. Having been a former national sales manager, he picked a pretty salable piece of merchandise for his first venture. Then he picked a pretty salable cast for its principal roles—Allan Jones, Joe Penner, Martha Raye, Rosemary Lane, Charles Butterworth, Irene Hervey (Mrs. Allan Jones), Alan Mowbray, Eric Blore and Samuel S. Hinds. That's a heavy Levy on anybody's risibilities.

And while we are on the topic—which is just as good as any other with the temperature at 105 degrees, and I saw it with my own eyes, no matter what the Weather Bureau says—Allan Jones and Miss Hervey arrived in New York by plane yesterday morning for the New York premiere of "Syracuse" at the Paramount Theater tomorrow. Allan, incidentally, has just finished "There's Magic in Music," with Susanna Foster, the youngster with the unbelievable voice range. That one is about the music camp at Interlochen, Mich., famous throughout the world.

When the Willard Roof Players break out "The Night of January 16" tonight, John Sikken will be a member of the cast. One of Washington's most competent and most popular resident actors, Mr. Sikken, who at one time or another has played with practically all of the local acting groups and once supported Ethel Barrymore with Stephen E. Cochran's old National Players, has been quiescent for something over a year. A pleasure to have him back in the running. That selective jury, by the way, will be chosen by lot from numbers given the patrons as they file into the Willard's top floor. You may be one of them.

If you can answer the questions, "How does a bashful man propose marriage? Or how does one prevail upon a bashful man to declare his honorable intentions?" there is a free-gratis-for-nothing week-end vacation trip to the Chamberlain Hotel, Old Point Comfort, Va., as a possible reward. The idea is to suppose yourself to be in Laurence Olivier's place in "Pride and Prejudice," next attraction at Loew's Palace. The best note on the subject—serious, romantic, plaintive or downright humorous—will win the junket. Address the Loew publicity department, NOT THIS NEWSPAPER. We have nothing to do with it, beyond printing this.

From Bakery To Stardom Is A Short Leap

Florence Bates, Seen In 'Rebecca,' Proves It by Own Career

By Frederick C. Othman,
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, July 30.—You're always reading about a beautiful redhead from a manicure shop becoming a movie actress overnight; about the department store clerk who reached stardom, and so on—indefinitely.

It makes interesting reading, too, but did you ever hear of a middle-aged woman, whose husband had lost a fortune, and who was flat broke, and who also became a movie star? You probably haven't unless you have heard the story of Florence Bates. And you probably haven't heard it, because she didn't tell anybody about it until today.

The 52-year-old Miss Bates, who is plump and gray and full of ideas, told her story on the set of "Calling All Husbands," in which she is costarring at Warner Brothers. A year ago she was selling cup cakes in a bakery. Boy!

Once Practiced Law

In 1914 Miss Bates, then known as Florence Rabe, was the only woman lawyer in San Antonio, Tex. She practiced for four years, and did all right at it, too. Then she quit to join her sister in a large antique business they had inherited from their father. They traveled regularly to Europe and Asia to get objets d'art. It was a big business; too big. Came the 1929 crash and the business went blooey. Miss Bates' sister died.

Our heroine by then was married to a wealthy oil man. They had a small daughter and they moved to Mexico, where her husband owned 60,000 acres of oil property near Tampico. They were on the way to becoming multimillionaires when complications involving below-the-border politics caused them to lose all.

Their daughter died and this knocked the props from beneath them. A friend suggested that Miss Bates might forget her troubles if she'd take a dramatic course at the Pasadena Playhouse.

"And I did and it was wonderful," she said. "It was so unlike anything I'd ever done that I felt I'd entered an entirely new world."

For nearly two years she appeared in one play after another, while her husband stayed with his bakery. Then she got her first chance in the movies, playing Joan Fontaine's traveling companion in the early sequences of "Rebecca." She did so well, as you will remember, that Edward Small gave her a better part in "The Son of Monte Cristo," which has not yet been released.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 30.

J. EDGAR HOOVER: Six volunteers, most of whom are veterans of the war in Spain, are guarding the Daily Worker's office against bombing. Those six are applying for pistol-permits.

WENDELL WILLKIE: Before his father decided upon a third-term candidacy, Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., toured the Midwest, South and Southwest, making his own private poll of Roosevelt's chances. F. D., jr., went to places where he was unrecognized—and asked cab drivers, laborers and businessmen whether they'd support Roosevelt. The result, he decided, was favorable.

LANA TURNER: Artie Shaw will try to forget, by resuming his work, Shaw's reassembled orchestra, disbanded when he suddenly retired some months ago, will work with him at Catalina.

CLARK GABLE: That Red Cross tour in which you and so many other stars were to participate—by making personal appearances in a cross-country trek—is being called off. Although the advance publicity has been tremendous, the sponsors decided that more money can be raised, in less time and with less difficulty, by presenting these stars in a series of broadcasts. . . . BUDDY DE SYLVA: Your former songwriting partners, Lew Brown and Ray Henderson, who resumed their collaboration recently, will release 25 new songs within the next few days. . . . EQUITY: Ralph Whitehead, head of the American Federation of Actors, has resigned from the Trustee Fund management of that group, which is in process of dissolution. Control of the remaining finances of the organization, thereby passes from the founder.

EUGENE O'NEILL: Sinclair Lewis, disturbed by the high royalty rate you demand for a Broadway revival of one of your shows in which he wants to appear here, says he's willing, in return, to have you play the lead in the play he wrote, "Angela Is 22."

MARK HELLINGER: George Raft, star of your newest hit production, "They Drive By Night," danced a Charleston at Leon & Eddie's Sunday night—while he wore carpet slippers. Bert Wheeler, who now is at Loew's State—in opposition to Raft, at the Strand—told the audience: "If that's what you like, I can Raft one better." Wheeler thereupon danced in his bare feet.

VINCENT ASTOR: Because a new tenant in one of your apartment buildings insisted upon lower rental, explaining that he didn't require so many rooms, two of the rooms in this apartment have been sealed up, and he'll pay a proportionately reduced rental—while the sealed rooms, of course, never can be used.

EMILY POST: Henri Bernstein, the French playwright, who recently arrived, listened to a N. Y. husband, who is very solicitous about his wife, berate a friend for having driven a car too speedily, when he escorted the lady to an upstate party. "I can't understand you Americans," Bernstein told the husband. "In Europe men don't worry when other men drive their wives in cars too fast. When they drive too slow, that's when you should worry."

JOHN BARRYMORE: Otto Ludwig Preminger, instructor at Yale's School of Drama, and who directed your show, "My Dear Children," addressed the students about the practical side of directing a play. "Give us one real practical suggestion," a student insisted—and so Preminger told them: "When you're directing a play on Broadway, never go to lunch with the star and the producer. It means you're always stuck with the check."

JIM FARLEY: The first Hollywood wager on the election was made by Bing Crosby. Bing wired N. Y. last week, placing $1,000 on Willkie. He received 7 to 5 odds. . . . JOHN D. M. HAMILTON: The Federal Government will prod, officially, attorneys appointed in connection with some utility work, and ask the reason for the slow progress of the report.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 30 (INS).—One hundred and nine young musicians sponsored by Leopold Stokowski and the National Youth Administration have themselves a movie contract. Really an interesting story with Stokowski, who auditioned 15,000 of these girls and boys, acting as the patron saint. He selected 109 to go on tour with him in South America. They gave their initial concerts recently and were a sensation. So Charles Rogers has signed the 109 girls and boys as well as Stokowski for "Serenade of Youth," a movie he will make next January.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

You can see how well this group will be publicized, for they are on their way to South America now with the blessings of Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and when they return will tour the United States. Charlie will seek a major release.

The blonde, quiet-spoken Baron Barnekow, who was here for so many months before the war started, is engaged to marry Baroness Bodenhausen, his cousin, who nursed him when he was wounded in battle. Interesting that he announced his intention to marry the baroness immediately after Kay Francis broke her engagement to him. While he was here no one had any idea that he was a Nazi. He gave the impression that on the contrary, his sympathies were against the Hitler regime. I'll say for Kay as soon as he joined the German flying corps, she dropped him like a hot potato. The baron has been wounded in action four times.

Y. Frank Freeman got on the telephone today and called Harry Carey at Skowhegan, Maine, asking him to please get on his horse and come home. At first Harry, who is in stock here, was a little reluctant, but when the head man at Paramount told him that he was wanted for the shepherd in "The Shepherd of the Hills," the Harold Bell Wright story, Harry said he'd be here when the roll is called August 19. Robert Preston and Betty Fields have the romantic leads, and Henry Hathaway is directing, so you see it's to be one of Paramount's top pictures.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Fred MacMurrays have adopted a 6-week-old cutie named Susan. Mrs. Fred says Susan is a beauty, blue eyes and light brown hair; Florence Rice and Dalies Frantz, musician and actor, have been whispering sweet nothings to each other two nights in succession at Bill Jordan's Bar of Music; Alice Faye and Sandy Cummings have cooled—but definitely—and she was with Artie Shaw at Slapsy Maxie's while Sandy was at the Tail-o'-the-Cock twice in a row with Elsa Elrod, pretty non-professional; wonder what's happened to Helen Gilbert and Vic Orsatti? He has been dating Mary Ainslee.

Wally Beery and his ex-wife Rita forgetting their differences long enough to dine together at the Beverly Tropics with Carol Ann; Diana Lewis tossed a birthday party for Bill Powell Sunday, and all his favorite pals were there to wish him many happy returns; Elsa Maxwell entertained Saturday night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Russell, of San Francisco; Hedy Lamarr, who hasn't gone out much socially since she and Gene Markey separated, at the Maxwell party by herself; Norma Shearer also came alone, but then, her heart, George Raft, is in New York; Loretta Young, positively radiant, sat and held hands with her fiance, Tom Lewis; Reginald Gardiner was in rare form and sang cockney song after song, with Jimmy Stewart and Olivia de Havilland joining in the chorus; Elsa also played a few popular numbers, and it was great fun to hear all our Hollywood glamour girls join in.

Irene Dunne, who looked so-o beautiful, sang and helped with her voice which was the best at the party; Constance Bennett, who has been rehearsing for "Tonight at 8:30," came in late; Hal Roach and Darryl Zanuck spent the evening playing rummy.

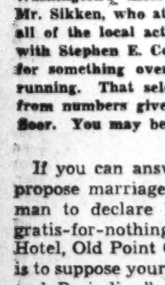
That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, July 30.

Yes, Paulette Goddard will do a twinkletoe dance with Fred Astaire in "Second Chorus." She also burst into tears while practicing that routine the other day, 'cause her feet were bleeding. She'd danced for eight hours. Tells me that never in her life has she known such patience as Fred Astaire's. Anything she does in the picture, she'll thank him for.



HOPPER

And when I asked her why she didn't show up at that Red Cross party which Mrs. Ernest Lubitsch and her coworkers gave (and for which they can afford to take plenty of bows), Paulette said, "The answer's very simple. They wanted me to have Diego Rivera, who's an exile, donate one of his paintings so they could auction it off. And when I replied, 'Who do you think I am—Mme. du Barry?'—I wasn't very popular."

There's a funny situation on that "Second Chorus" set, too. Backer Robert Stillman hired Hank Potter, the director, and now acts as Hank's assistant, because he wants to learn about pictures. But when the shooting is over and the day is done, it's Stillman who tells Hank what he does and doesn't like about the day's rushes.

After Al Jolson's misery—selling his house—losing Ruby Keeler, he goes to Florida, falls in love with Gloria Cook, showers her with presents, promises her a part in his Broadway show. Al comes home, persuades Ruby to do the show with him, gives her a 24-karat diamond ring—and when the show gets into swingtime, he falls for Jinx Falkenberg. In the meantime, Gloria Cook's taken ill, goes to the hospital. Al sings his torch song to Ruby, who's leaving the show, to marry her Pasadena boy friend maybe—and the name of the song he sings is "Don't Let It Get You Down." And all the time, Martha Raye goes merrily on and steals the show from everybody! Now you tell one—I haven't any more left.

I hear that N. T. G., of Florentine Gardens, is trying to get a spot on "Information Please" for his new protegee. Her name is "Miss Unconscious."

Errol Flynn wouldn't introduce his new blonde at Billy Jordan's Bar of Music the other night. And what a quiet, informal place. You'll love Billy's arrangement of "Three Blind Mice."

But I still go for Mattey Malneck at Victor Hugo's. He's top in toots for my money — pardon! He's smoothie to a G-string—fiddle to you.

Producer Howard Benedict walked into the office of Millionaire Producer Howard Hughes not long ago, and said, "Howard, we want to use the plane in which you made a record transcontinental flight, for one shot in our picture, 'Men Against the Sky.' It'll take an hour to shoot. How much will you charge us?" Howard, without taking his feet off his desk, said, "A thousand dollars." "A thousand!" screamed Benedict. "Lord, man, with your millions you could give it to us free." "Sorry," said Hughes, "I just happen to need a thousand." So Benedict wrote the check on the spot. Hughes called his secretary, and said, "Blot this and send it out by special messenger to the San Fernando Valley Orphanage—I hear they need some money today."

Leonard Blanks Browns, 4-0, in Night Contest

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, July 30.—This is the year when the American League pennant is going begging. Some club will win it, of course, but the triumph will be strictly by default. There isn't a team in the league that seems to deserve the pennant. All of them have their horrible drawbacks. This is the year when a half-decent club could take it all.

POVICH

Cleveland has strong pitching and a clever infield, but the Indians can't hit. The Tigers are out in front purely because they can hit. Detroit's pitching is tolerable, but the Tigers' infield invites defeat. The Red Sox can hit and field, but their pitching is the worst in the league, bar none, honest.

It's the kind of a league in which the worst Yankee team in 15 years can stay pretty close to third place, sans either pitching or hitting.

What about the fifth-place White Sox? That's the club that must be admired, if not taken seriously as a pennant threat. Jimmy Dykes seems to have done a job on the nondescript Chicago club, and if the effects of his magic had asserted themselves a bit sooner in the season, it would not be difficult to count the White Sox in on the pennant.

Dykes probably qualifies as the manager of the year. He has his club in fifth place only a game removed from the first division and only three games behind the third-place Red Sox. This was the team that was supposed to battle the Nats for possession of sixth place, but you'd never recognize 'em. For the past two weeks they've been the hottest club in the league.

The answer to the White Sox's surge is plain enough. Dykes simply has whipped his gang of cast-offs into surpassing themselves. They weren't supposed to hit much, but you'll note that the team leading the league at bat is Chicago. The White Sox excel in nothing in particular, but they appear at this writing to be the best balanced club in the league.

No great drawback to the White Sox has been big Julius Solters who is causing the Indians to rue the day they asked waivers on him. Dykes planned it that way. He always reasoned that Solters was a good hitter and that he was "unhappy" at Cleveland where Oscar Vitt had a habit of calling the big Magyar a "dumb hunky." Dykes is the first of the four managers for whom Solters has played who told him he was good enough to take a regular job and hold it. It is paradoxical that in the year when Dykes traded off the man who is leading the club at bat, that Dykes has been a successful trader. Dykes sent Rip Radcliff to the Browns and at first glance that appears to be a mistake inasmuch as Radcliff's .372 average is now the best in the league. But Solters is driving in more runs for the White Sox than Radcliff is, and if Solters is not a deft outfielder than he is, at least a better outfielder than the bungling Radcliff.

By other trades, Dykes has bolstered the White Sox. He brought Taft Wright from Washington in exchange for Gerald Walker and now has the pleasure of seeing Wright outhit Walker by 50 points. Dykes was willing to gamble on Wright's sins in the outfield, but strangely Wright has blossomed as a better outfielder this year than he ever was in his three seasons at Washington.

Four years ago Dykes blocked a trade with the Tigers until they agreed to throw in a young catcher named Mike Tresh. The Tigers tossed him into the deal with alacrity, wondering why the White Sox wanted Tresh. They no longer wonder why Dykes was insistent. Young Tresh is one of the four best catchers in the league and one of the reasons the White Sox are getting places in the league.

The fact is that Dykes hasn't made a bad trade in years. He maneuvered Pitcher Thornton Lee in a three-cornered deal with Washington and Cleveland, giving up only John Salveson, who never did make good. He traded Bonnie Berger to the Red Sox in an even swap for Eric McNair. Berger is now in the minors, and McNair is still a valuable big league chattel. He signed young Billy Webb from the minors after the Indians gave up on him, and Webb has been the making of the Chicago infield since Jackie Hayes was stricken in spring training.

Dykes has doubtless enjoyed many a chuckle at the peringrinations of Zeke Bonura to Washington, to the Giants, and back to Washington and thence to the Cubs. The litle round manager of the White Sox tabbed Bonura as a flop back in 1938, but concealed his thoughts in matter until he inveigled Clark Griffith into taking Zeke in an even swap for Joe Kuhel, who continues to be among the top first basemen in the league. What Dykes did was to swap his first base worries for a good first baseman.

The White Sox aren't a good ball team yet. Their pitching is something less than to be desired, and they still have a problem at third base. But Dykes has surrounded himself with a passel of good ball players, and in a league like this, they are distinctly one of the better clubs.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 30.—Jim Farley's defense of Harry Wills' rights, when Jim was the principal boxing solon of New York, will be used as a just reason why he should encourage the entrance of colored ball players into the Yankee chain.

CONSIDINE

Fourteen years ago Farley risked public censure in many places by driving his friend, the enormously popular Dempsey, out of New York. Dempsey had promised Farley that he would defend his title against Wills. Tex Rickard and Jack Kearns were not in favor of the fight. They believed they could draw more money with Gene Tunney, and that Tunney wouldn't be as tough a foe. Farley was adamant, and the Dempsey-Tunney fights went to Philadelphia and Chicago. New York lost millions of dollars which would have been spread around the city by the fight visitors. But Farley had struck a blow for fair play. He was accused of making a play for the Harlem vote, but he denied that. And the ensuing years have proven that Jim tells the truth a remarkable percentage of the time—for a person who has given so many of his years to politics.

We were in Ford Frick's office the other day when Joseph F. McMahon, who played a lot of baseball around Kansas City many years ago, came in bearing a picket sign. McMahon is an elderly man who draws a pension from a musicins union.

Frick wsn't there, nor was any other member of the National League staff except Bill Brandt's secretary. McMahon displayed his picket sign to her, and she took down its wording on a pad. It read:

UNFAIR
TO COLOR RACE
ALL PROFESSIONAL TRADES TREAT THEM EQUAL
SINCE LINCOLN

"I've seen Frick several times about colored ball players," the old gentleman told us. "He's very decent about it, too. He says, 'I don't care if the teams in our league hire colored players. I'd certainly raise no objection. But it's up to the individual owners, not to me.'

"That's real sporting of him, don't you think? But those others I've seen! Stoneham and Barrow and a few others. They seem nervous even talking to me. Myself, I can't understand why baseball should bar colored men any more than boxing does, or college football. John McGraw was always for them. He used one once, called him a Cuban. Well, this movement's growing all the time. I think Jim Farley will be the man who puts it over."

Speaking of colored ball players reminds us of the interesting sepost piece on Satchel Paige by Ted Shane. There is no doubt that there have been colored players whose inherent talent entitled them to the rewards of the big leagues. And it was hypocritical and intolerant to keep them out of what is called the national game.

But to assume that all the better known colored players were or are good enough to jump the minor leagues and be given jobs in the big show is as foolish as to assume that all Irishmen make great fighters, or all Polish-Americans work on the Fordham football team.

Paige, undisputed No. 1 figure in colored ball, probably was excellent a few years ago. Back in 1934 Dizzy Dean, in an expansive mood, said Satch was the greatest pitcher in the world. Right now Satch must be close to 40, if not over that, and his poor training facilities, picnic food and barnstorming life must have militated against his condition.

Shane, like many other writers, lent a supernatural aura to various colored stars. He compared the current Paige to Bobby Feller, because of their strikeouts—overlooking the fact that Feller pitches daily against the likes of DiMaggio, Foxx, Greenberg, etc. Shane also says that Jim (Fancy Dan) West is a better-fielding first baseman than was Hal Chase, which will bring a chuckle from old timers.

This writer thinks colored players who are good enough should have a chance in a game which has been so well supported by colored fans. You'd think that some of the owners would take the long chance and hire a couple of outstanding colored players. There would be trouble, probably, at first. But in time that would straighten itself out.

Esposa Bows In 2-Horse Race at Spa

Widener Star Beats Rival by 5 Lengths To Pay $2.10; 4,780 Witness 7-Race Card

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 30.—A two-horse race, not uncommon in the leaner days of New York racing, but a rarity in these times for any track, headed the ssecond program of the meeting today. George D. Widener's Eight Thirty, hero of the recent Massachusetts Handicap and Challedon's main rival for the country's handicap division title, toyed with William Ziegler, jr.,'s Esposa to take the $3,100 winner's share of the eleventh Wilson Stakes, at 1 mile.

Eight Thirty, scoring his second straight success in the event, galloped home in 1:39 1-5 and was five lengths in front of the elderly mare at the end of the weight-for-age affair.

Only 4,780 fans paid to see the seven-race card. They wagered $9,873 on Eight Thirty and $1,705 on Esposa. Eight Thirty paid the prohibitive price of $2.10, which is equivalent to the 5 cents on the dollar which must be paid according to the State racing law. With the $11,578 wagered on this race, the total for the first five races came to only $113,800. Esposa closed at $5.10 to $1.

Esposa was making her third start of the year, but she apparently has lost her one-time splendid form, the sort that saw her win the Wilson three years ago. She was brought back to racing this season after failing as a broodmare. She is now 8 years old.

It was a race to the end of the back stretch, Harry Richards being content to allow Esposa to stay head-and-head with the favorite until the far turn. Then Eight Thirty bounded into the clear and never was out of triple wraps.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash, which chased Eight Thirty home in the Massachusetts 'Cap, worked a mile and a quarter in 2:08, eased up, this morning, the stable passing up the Wilson and bringing about the virtual walkover for Eight Thirty.

Durocher Tossed From Game for Protesting Strike

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 30.—Fiery Leo Durocher, manager of the Dodgers, was expelled from tonight's game with the Pittsburgh Pirates for arguing over a third strike called on Peewee Reese.

Reese protested alone when he was fanned in the fifth inning, but at the start of the sixth Durocher and Coach Chuck Dressen took up the debate with Umpire Ziggy Sears.

Manager Frank Frisch, of the Pirates, and three players, two form Pittsburgh and one from Brooklyn, were put out of yesterday's game for protests and fighting.

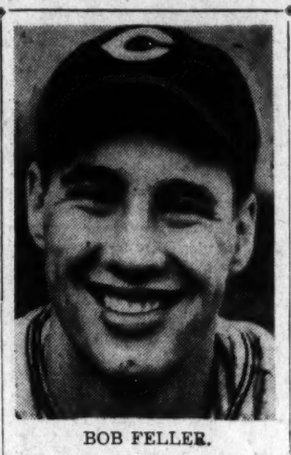
Bobby Wins 17th, Gives Eight Hits, Fans Like Number

Cleveland, July 3 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians moved into a first-place tie with Detroit here tonight as Bob Feller hurled his seventeenth victory of the year in stopping Boston, 2 to 1. Feller gave up eight hits and fanned eight. Cleveland got nine hits off starter Jim Bagby and Jack Wilson. The crowd was 49,238.

Cleveland scored its first run in the second inning on aHl Trosky's single, a walk and sacrifice and aRy Mack's single. The winning run came in the sixth on singles by Ken Keltner and Mack and an infield out.

The Sox pushed over their run in the fourth on a walk, a single by Ted Williams and one of Lou Finney's three hits.

Boston filled the bases in the seventh on a walk and two hits but Feller fanned Pinch-hitter Jimmy Foxx and Dominic DiMaggio. A double play snuffed out a Boston rally in the ninth with two men on base.



BOB FELLER.

Bagby gave up eight hits in six innings and was charged with the defeat, his 10th of the year against seven victories. Feller has lost six games.

'Bitsy' Grant Knocked Out Of Net Meet

Mighty Atom Beaten By Public Parks Titlist; Riggs Victor

By the Associated Press

Southampton, July 30.—Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, the once mighty mite of Atlanta, was eliminated from the Meadow Club Invitation tournament today by Seymour Greenberg, of Chicago, National Public Links Parks champion, 6—2, 5—7, 6—4.

Grant's exit was the only jolt in an otherwise uneventful day which saw the favored players, led by National Champion Bobby Riggs, enter the third round. Riggs, who has won the title for three years, knocked out Leon Everett, of Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—3. Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, seeded second, defeated Jim Robb, of Southampton, 6—1, 6—3, and John Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., 7—5, 6—2.

Van Ryn's old doubles mate, Wilmer Allison, also of Austin, was ousted by Fourth-seeded Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., 6—2, 1—6, 7—5. Cooke also disposed of Bill McGehee, of New Orleans, 6—4, 6—2. Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., rated a notch below Cooke in the draw, won at 6—4, 5—7, 6—4, from Bill Reedy, of Los Angeles.

Gil Hunt, of Washington, seeded sixth, reached the round of sixteenth with a 0—6, 6—2, 6—4 triumph over Vincent Paul, of Brooklyn, while Hank Prusoff, Seattle giant, who is seventh seeded, crushed Ed Amark, of San Francisco, 6—4, 6—2. Sidney Wood, of New York, eighth and last seeded, defeated Frank Shields, of New York, 6—3, 6—1.

The two Gils—Hunt and Hall—gained the second round of doubles by defeating Alstair B. Martin and Esmond Martin, Locust Valley, N. Y., 6—4, 7—5.

Truett Sewell Notches 8th Victory, Allows Brooklyn Six Hits

By International News Service

New York, July 30.—The Pittsburgh Pirates trounced the skidding Brooklyn Dodgers, 8-2, tonight behind the steady six-hit pitching of Truett Sewell, who chalked up his eighth victory of the season.

The Pirates took a commanding lead at the start when they pushed over four runs in the first inning off Ed Head on three walks, two doubles and Pep Young's squeeze bunt.

They added two more in the third off Vito Tamulis, when Al Lopez homered with a man on base, and scored an additional two in the seventh on three singles off Hugh Casey.

Nats Fail to Get Vernon, to Keep Bloodworth at 1st

St. Louis, July 30.—Clark Griffith tonight informed Manager Bucky Harris of the Nats that Mickey Vernon, Washington-owned first baseman now at Jersey City, was unavailable.

Harris had asked Griffith to obtain Vernon who was on loan to the Jersey City club but Jersey City insisted on keeping him until the end of the season as was originally agreed by the Nats. The Nats, without a rgular first baseman since the sale of Zeke Bonura, will continue to play Bloodworth at the position. Bloodworth has ousted Sammy West out of the job.

Frisch Gets Another Fine For Dispute

Buc Manager Handed $100 Penalty; Three Players Also Involved

New York, July 30 (AP).—Manager Frankie Frisch, two of his Pittsburgh Pirates players and Catcher Babe Phelps of the Brooklyn Dodgers were fined a total of $200 today by President Ford Frick of the National League for yesterday's hostilities at Ebbets Field.

Frisch, who was tossed out of a game for the sixth time this season, was fined $100.

Frick explained the penalty was "for dressing and coming into the stands and resuming the argument with the umpires in public at the close of the game as they were leaving the field."

Phelps and Buc Shortstop Arky Vaughan received a $25 penalty each for their fist fight in the ninth inning, for which both were thumbed to the showers.

Second-sacker Frank Gustine of the Pirates drew a $50 fine for "misconduct on the field."

So far this season Fisch has been fined around $400. The last time it was $50 on June 8 and the time before $75 on May 21.

Tigers Bow To Ruffing By 8-6 Count

Red Homers to Aid In Taking His 10th Victory; 3d Loss In Row for Detroit

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 30.—Red Ruffing lifted the bedraggled New York Yankees out of a forgotten corner today and covered the American League pennant picture with confusion by drubbing the Detroit Tigers, 8 to 6.

It was the third straight setback for the Tigers and put them in jeopardy of a tie with Cleveland for first place, pending the Indians' night game with the Boston Red Sox.

Ruffing put on a grand show for six innings, and even though he weakened so badly he had to be lifted in the eighth, he got credit for his tenth triumph of the season.

Hits Three-run Homer

Rufus the Red pitched five-hit shutout ball for the first six innings and hit a three-run homer for the Yankee cause in the sixth.

His teammates finished building him an 8-0 lead in the seventh, driving young Hal Newhouser from the mound, but the veteran Ruffing couldn't stand the heat and the raging temper of the Tigers, who crowded all their runs into two innings with Rudy York hitting two home runs and Pete Fox one.

York's first homer opened the seventh stanza and was followed by two singles and a force-out for another run.

York Gets Eighteenth

York's second round-tripper of the game and eighteenth of the year came behind Hank Greenberg's single in the eighth. Then Pinky Higgins singled and Fox homered for the other runs, but Johnny Murphy snuffed out the rally quickly.

7-Hit Effort Gives Dutch 11th Victory

Walker's 3 Hits, Pofahl's Fine Stop Featured; No Passes Allowed by Knuckler

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

St. Louis, July 30.—The Dutchman was clever tonight. Dutch Leonard had complete control of his skittish knuckle ball and the St. Louis Browns under the lights of Sportsman's Park and notched his eleventh victory of the season on behalf of the Nats. It was a shutout job—4 to 0.

With his family from nearby Illinois sitting in box seats abaft the Washington dugout, the big, baldish right-hander bamboozled the Browns with seven hits. Not until the ninth inning did he permit one of the natives to reach third base. He didn't issue a base on balls.

While Leonard held a tight grip on the Browns, Gerald Walker shook most of the winning runs out of 'em. He swatted three consecutive hits against Johnny Whitehead and Roxie Lawson and figured in every run-scoring inning. Walker scored two of the Nats' runs and drove in a third.

Pofahl Saves Shutout

To young Jimmy Pofahl, Leonard owes his shutout triumph. A spectacular play by the rookie shortstop in the ninth inning nipped a St. Louis rally and prevented at least one run from scoring. With two on base and one out, Pofahl made a diving stop of a fierce smash by Berardino and converted it into a force-out.

A crowd of 5,078 customers watched the proceedings on St. Louis' hottest night of the year with the thermometer hovering around 100. Manager Fred Haney attempted to beat the Nats with big Johnny Whitehead, recently recalled from Toledo where he had won six games and lost six. Whitehead lasted only six innings and was cuffed for nine of the Nats' eleven hits.

Through the first six innings, Leonard pitched three-hit ball. The Nats, meanwhile, rolled up a 3-0 lead.

The game rocked along in a 0-0 deadlock until the fourth when with one out, Walker singled to center for the Nats' second hit off Whitehead. Cecil Travis contributed the important blow of the inning—a line drive double to left that moved Walker to third. He scored when Jimmy Bloodworth grounded out to Heffner.

Walker then launched a five-hit attack that netted the Nats two runs in the fifth with a single to left. Travis flied out, but Bloodworth hit the right field screen with a long drive that moved Walker to third. Bloodworth was out, however, trying to stretch his blow to a double, Grace taking the ball off the screen and making a perfect throw to second. Buddy Myer got the important blow of the inning—a line drive triple to center that scored Walker. Pofahl ushered home the second run by beating out a slow roller to Clift.

Buddy Lewis set a run in motion against Roxie Lawson in the seventh, when he doubled to right center with one out. Walker drove a two-bagger against the left field wall, only inches short of a homer, and Lewis romped home with the last run of the ball game.

Dutch in Trouble

The first man to face Leonard tonight got one of the Browns' seven hits. Grace opened the game for the Browns with a single to center, but Leonard escaped damage when McQuinn drove a liner into Travis' glove and Grace was doubled off first base.

Leonard was never in danger of losing his shut-out again until the seventh when Judnich led off with a double to right after Travis had missed his easy foul pop. It was the Browns' first hit since the third inning. The Browns couldn't move Judnich off second, however. Leonard struck out the side in the eighth.

The ninth threatened trouble for Leonard when McQuinn led off with a single through the box. Judnich followed with an infield single down the third base line that moved McQuinn to second. In this emergency, Leonard fanned Laabs with three knuckle balls and then it was that Pofahl rescued him with a sparkling play on Berardino's smash for the second out. Pofahl also came up with Clift's hard grounder for the game-ending out.

Reds Check Slump, Defeat Giants Behind Derringer, 6 to 3

Cincinnati Scores Four In 8th Frame

Shumacher, Fifth Of Giant Hurlers, Is Loser; Disputes With Ump Mark Game

By the Associated Press

New York, July 30.—The Cincinnati Reds, who haven't had a losing streak longer than three games this year, routed the New York Giants, 6 to 3, today to stop a backslide of two straight games.

It was Paul Derringer, again, who got credit for setting the Reds back on the right trail although the real winning medium was a scoring outburst of four runs in a wild eighth inning that brought about the banishment of two men.

Neither the Reds nor the Giants liked the umpiring in that particular chapter and Coach Jimmy Wilson of the champions and Relief Pitcher Walter (Jumbo) Brown, of the Giants, were waived to the showers for saying so.

Bases Loaded

The score was tied as the Reds came to bat in the eighth, but they loaded the bases with a single, a sacrifice that turned out safe, and another single.

Then Pinch Hitter Mike Dejan, a rookie, looked at a third strike and the Reds erupted around George Magerkurth with the usual result.

The smoke of battle had hardly cleared as Bill Werber grounded to Tony Cuccinello and was called safe at first, bringing the Giants to a boil. Umpire Bill Stewart won that argument. The Reds scored once on this play and still had the bases loaded. Harry Craft then singled to center for two runs and Lonny Frey singled in the same direction for one.

Derringer Yanked

Derringer was removed for a pinch hitter during the uprising, but got credit for his fifteenth victory of the season and came abreast of teammate Bucky Walters in the win column for the first time. He had the help of Joe Beggs, who finished the game and gave up a run to New York in the ninth on Mel Ott's double and Harry Danning's single.

Hal Schumacher, first of five pitchers used by the Giants, was charged with the loss. He gave up the first run by the Reds on three singles in the first inning, the second score in the seventh on a walk, a single by Derringer and a fly, and put the winning runs on base in the eighth.

New York's first two runs came in the sixth on a triple by Bob Seeds and a home run by Burgess Whitehead.

Mize Blasts Two Homers; Cards Victors

Boston, July 30.—Johnny Mize registered his twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth homers of the season today, while his St. Louis Cardinals were overwhelming the Boston Bees, 13-5, in a lusty slugfest.

Mize rapped out his first homer when he opened the fifth inning against Starter Bill Posedel and collected his second one of the game against Al Javery in the ninth with Enos Slaughter on base.

The Cards belted those Bees' twirlers for 19 hits, including a homer by Ernie Koy and a triple by Don Padgett during their five-run stand against Posedel in the third inning.

Lon Warneke held the Bees to 10 hits, including a homer by Sebby Sisti and doubles by Max West, Eddie Miller and Johnny Cooney, but the veteran right-hander kept them well scattered and never was in serious trouble.

Sgt. Jasper Junior Nine Gains Play-off

Legion Team Will Meet Cooley-McCullough Club for Right to Enter Regional Championship Play

Leading all the way and staving off a determined Fort Stevens rally in the late innings, Sergt. Jasper Post nine annexed the American Legion Junior Baseball League's second-half title yesterday with a 5-4 victory.

As a result the Jaspers face Cooley-McCullough Saturday at Griffith Stadium in the first of a three-game series for the D. C. title. Cooley-McCullough captured the first half crown. The winner will represent Washington in the regional championship tourney at Wilson, N. C., in which teams from the District, North Carolina, Maryland and Virginia will play.

Credit for yesterday's victory went to Pitcher Wilkerson, who went the distance and made a crucial assist in the seventh. With the tying run on third, Wilkerson stabbed a high bouncer and hurled to Catcher Carrier to make the out. It was one of the most spectacular plays of an interesting battle.

Fort Stevens sluggers reached Wilkerson for 11 safeties, while Joy and Weisenberg combined to allow the winners only nine. Clutch hitting, however, made the difference. Leading the attack of Sgt. Jasper was Second Baseman Denicos, who registered three hits in five official times at the plate.

Going into the crucial series Saturday, Sgt. Jasper boasts a slightly better record—10 victories in 12 games throughout the season. Cooley-McCullough has played the same number of games but lost one more.

Lou Plummer Faces Sexton In Arena Bout

Lou Plummer, Baltimore's outstanding professional wrestler, and Frank Sexton, former Ohio State University athlete, have been matched for a semiwindup bout on tomorrow night's benefit wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

The show, which is being staged to aid the District cab drivers, who are forming a relief association to provide hospitalization for their families, will be headlined by a return engagement between Paul Jones, the Texas figure-four king, and Joe Cox, of Kansas.

A battle royal also is slated between the Golden Terror, Ed White, Ed Newman, Tom Mahoney and Rob Russell, while Warren Rockwinkle, former St. Louis University athlete, will meet Joe Dusek in a special 30-minute bout.

A Sexton-Plummer match comes under the heading of "naturals," since it brings together a terrific villian in Plummer and a clean cut, scientific grappler in Sexton. Undefeated locally, Sexton drew last week with Bockwinkle in one of the best bouts on the card.

Toast of the Sandlots . . .

He came to his present team when it was problematic whether he'd ever be much of a catcher again. His leg was badly damaged. But Manager "Connie" Wyche had seen him play and wanted him—bad leg or no.

Today "Connie" calls Jimmy Schwab "the finest sandlot catcher in Washington." That, of course, may contain a certain amount of prejudice in Jimmy's favor because he's leading Wyche's Cameo Furniture nine, which in turn leads The Washington Post Industrial League. But 15 years of viewing sandlot players lie behind Wyche's statement.

Twenty-four years old, husky and a peppery sort in his backstop position, Schwab is one of two full-fledged plumbers on the Cameo club. This is first year with the team. He went to Tech High here for two years, but another leg injury forced him to leave school. That injury, incidentally, resulted from athletics—but not high school athletics.

Schwab's activities with the Hessick Coal sandlot football team brought about the damage. He never played either football or baseball in high school. He's one of the very few sandlot players in the District who haven't had a half-hearted tryout with the Nats. Says he never wanted one, though he had numerous chances.

Manager Wyche's praise doesn't affect Jimmy in the least. It doesn't make his steady .376 batting average jump or fall. He just goes along enjoying the game.—BILL BURNETT.

Chicago collected 16 hits to the winners' 11, but the second stanza was the beginning of the payoff. Included in the onslaught was Mel Mazzera's double and a triple by Chuck Klein.

Cameo Scores 10-4 Victory Over Reliance

Post League Game Won With Fast Rally; Grillmen, Russell Meet

On the short end of a 2-1 count after two innings, the league-leading Cameo Furniture nine came on with a rush to score an impressive 10-4 triumph over Reliance Life in a Washington Post-Industrial League game yesterday on the Ellipse.

Three runs in the third inning and four in the fourth put the game out of Reliance's reach and sent Reliance pitcher Dick Rozzelle to the showers. DeAngelis finished, allowing Cameo one safety in the last three innings to bring its total to 10. Reliance reached Hahn and Deavers for 11 hits, including the only extra-base hits of the game, doubles by McHale and McNiel.

"Booty" McQuinn, Cameo second baseman, was the only winning player to get more than one hit. He hit three singles in four times up. Four critical misplays accounted for Reliance's downfall, and helped to boost Cameo's league lead to a game and a half. The Heurich Brewers are in second place.

O'Donnell's Sea Grill and Russell Motors nines today will clash in a postponed game, it was announced last night. The game will be on the North Ellipse at 5 p. m.

Bramham Denies Reinstatement Plea of Grimes

By the Associated Press

Flint, Mich., July 30.—Judge W. G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Minor Leagues, has refused to reinstate Burleigh Grimes as manager of the Grand Rapids Mich. State League Club Pending an appeal of a suspension, it was announced today by T. J. Halligan, head of the Michigan circuit.

Halligan received a telegram today from Bramham advising him that Grimes might appeal to the executive committee of the N. A. M. L. but in the meantime could not appear with the Grand Rapids team.

Umpire Robert Williams, with whom Grimes became involved in a dispute that led to his suspension, was fired by the league directors last night. The directors sent a message to Bramham urging him to grant Grimes, former manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, a hearing to allow him to manage his club while awaiting a final decision.

1940 Grid Campaign To Start With a Bang

Pitt-Ohio State, Tulane-Boston College, S. M. U.-U. C. L. A. Among Big Intersectional Games Carded Sept. 28, Official Opening Date

By the United Press

New York, July 30.—The 1940 college football schedule arrived today on the wings of the heat wave and it revealed that less than two months from now the season will get off to one of its greatest starts in history.

The schedule shows that in most cases the major schools have eliminated the traditional "breather" games. The official opening on the week-end of September 28 probably will find many of last year's giants starting off in the lost column.

Two of the teams that played in bowl games on New Year's Day—Southern California and Tulane—are among those who will see action on opening day and both go against big-time opposition. Southern California, shooting for another spot in the Rose Bowl, tackles Washington State and Tulane, beaten by the Texas Aggies in the Cotton Bowl, takes on a Boston College team that promises to be strong this year.

Intersectional contests will be the order for opening day. Michigan, expected to do big things in the Big Ten this year, travels to the Pacific Coast to face California; Washington journeys east for a game with Minnesota; Southern Methodist faces U. C. L. A. in Los Angeles and Pittsburgh meets Ohio State at Columbus.

As if that weren't enough, the second week of competition will find one of the most important games of the season being played at Knoxville, Tenn., where Duke, loser of only one game last year—to Pittsburgh by a point—moves against Tennessee, the Eastern Rose Bowl team.

The report from Durham, N. C., is that Duke is peeved over the lack of recognition it received last year and wants to take it out on Tennessee. Coach Wallace Wade is reported to have a wealth of material at hand and is supposed to be 10 deep in the backfield.

Among the "name" teams University of California at Los Angeles seems to have drawn the toughest schedule. The Uclans start off on September 28 with Southern Methodist and on successive week-ends meet Santa Clara, Texas Aggies, California, Oregon State, Stanford, Oregon, Washington State, Washington and Southern California.

Alabama seems to have picked the easiest schedule among the big-timers. The "Crimson Tide" plays Spring Hill, Mercer, Howard, Tennessee, Kentucky, Tulane, Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt and has a week of rest between the Tennessee and Kentucky games. They'll probably need it.

Notre Dame, as usual, will spend half of its season in sleeping cars. The Irish play College of Pacific, Georgia Tech, Carnegie Tech and Iowa at home and hit the road for Army, Illinois, Navy, Northwestern and Southern California.

Welsh to Attempt Comeback in D. C. Net

By Jack Munhall

His domination of local tennis having been interrupted by Davie Johnsen in the Middle Atlantic Championships, Barney Welsh will be attempting something of a comeback at Edgemoor Saturday, when he opens fire for his ninth straight District of Columbia Open title.

Welsh, whose loss to young Johnsen in the finals of the M. A. tournament was his first tournament defeat here in eight years, will head what looms as probably the strongest field to seek this crown in several years.

Besides Welsh and Johnsen, other strong District contenders will be Hugh Lynch, Dick Murphy, Alphonso Smith, Frank Shore, Buddy Adair, Lieut. Jimmy Farrin and Bobby Bensinger. Baltimore, its interest in tennis having reached a new peak during the recently finished Maryland States championships, will send a formidable delegation, including city champion Deaver Hobbs.

An unusually large number of junior players are expected to compete because of a new arrangement whereby they will have to pay only half of the regular entry fee of $2 for the singles. Besides Bensinger, the Middle Atlantic junior champion, the 18-years-and-under ranks probably will also be represented by Tom Wadden, Bensinger's runnerup in the M. A. event and also a finalist in the Maryland State Junior tournament in which Bensinger bowed out in the semifinals.

Although Welsh, at 28, hardly can be considered a has-been, there are many who believe Johnsen will be able to duplicate his Middle Atlantic tournament victory if they meet in the finals, as can be expected. Welsh, as defending champion, should be top-seeded, followed by Johnsen. Thus if form prevails they should be final-round opponents.

The sudden improvement of Johnsen, the 20-year-old George Washington University star, plus the recent slump of Welsh, is the argument advanced by Davie's followers who expect to see him enthroned as District champion for a long reign.

The most recent public performances of the two players would seem to bear out this logic. Johnsen was impressive in his first-round match with Jack Kramer in the Maryland State tourney. He lost 6-3, 6-4, but his showing was accounted good since the unseeded Kramer breezed into the finals, upsetting and defending champion Hal Surface and second-seeded Van Horn, before he was stopped by Don McNeill.

Welsh, on the other hand, was hardly brilliant in his one-set exhibition with Bitsy Grant Sunday, a week ago. Even though he was given little time to warm up, Barney was unusually erratic as he failed to win a game against the bounding Atlanta Atom.

Deadline for entries will be 4 p. m. Thursday at Edgemoor, where the draw will be made at that time, and at The Tennis Show, 1019 Fifteenth street northwest (Na. 5165).

Archer's Nilon Wins Bel Air Feature, Setting Course Record

Buddy Root Rides Victor; Pays $8.40

8,000 See Bel Air Owned Horse Shade Schley Goree in Record Time of 1:44

By Walter Haight

By a Staff Correspondent

Bel Air, Md., July 30.—Nilon, owned by J. S. Archer, of Bel Air, came in from New York and without as much as taking a peep at the racing oval, scampered off with the Conowingo Purse featuring today's program. In the saddle of the 4-year-old daughter of On Watch was Jockey Buddy Root, the ace rider at the meeting, and the Kansas City boy nudged Nilon over the finish line two lengths in advance of Schley Goree, owned by R. A. Bowman, jr. The latter headed Chalotaur, owned by Denny Gallota, of Washington, D. C., out of second money in a photo.

The crowd of 8,000 was well aware of Nilon's good form and rushed to the windows for more and more tickets. However, the final pay-off of $4.40 was considered fair and above board.

In addition to other things, Nilon continued the record bombardment that has been in progress over the mile and 70 yards course. The mark of 1:45 hung up by Sistaur, with Root up yesterday, was shaved down to 1:44 today.

Trainer C. M. Feltner, probably dissatisfied with Dulie's previous race, had Jockey Hernandez take the gelding to the top soon after the break. Chalotaur and Nilon were steadied closest to that leader for a half. At the far turn, Chalotaur went between Dulie and Nilon to take a brief lead. Root, however, had been biding his time with the favorite. Nearing the stretch he went to work and Nilon responded by going to the front.

Dulie stopped to a walk, but Chalotaur kept going. Nilon opened a daylight lead and then, from the rear came Schley Goree. The veteran charged along, but his move was good only to gain the place award. Nilon had too much punch.

A favorite and a well-played horse figured in a $29.30 pay-off in the daily double. The combination was 4 and 9.

Rippling On won the first race under good handling by Jockey Hernandez. The Omar Khayyam filly came to the wire three lengths in front of Glitter Girl, with Miss Neptune third. Frank H., a $9.20 shot, circled the leaders and won the second event by four lengths. Arboreal, the favorite, was second, with Red Trap third.

WALE SIGNAL, under slight restraint while within striking distance of leaders for half, moved up gradually when placed to drive, wore down MOLASSES JULIA and was under pressure to end. MOLASSES JULIA, on outside of leaders early, went to front when asked, closed gamely, but was no match for winner. NICK raced BRAZEN HUSSY into submission to take command, but weakened gradually thereafter. COTILLION saved ground from slow beginning and closed a gap.

SALBURNE was hard ridden while pressing pace of REMOLEE, was eased back when in close quarters and came again in late stages. BALKANESE moved up menacingly approaching stretch and weakened thereafter. DARK ACE was not serious factor.

SARANITE raced wide and forward from start, moved up menacingly and weakened baldly. SHALL WE DANCE was well placed early, forced pace for half and tired. CHANNING was in trouble early.

Bill Bennings

—At The Post

Dear Al:

Trainer George A. Cook, of Washington, D. C., is the proud father of a baby girl born yesterday. Mrs. Cook and baby are doing well at the Charles Town Hospital. The father is trainer for the Bennings Stable. Clayton Trippy, Challedon's exercise boy, also is passing out cigars. He has a brand-new son in the Baltimore University Hospital. Ten track records have been broken or equaled since the meeting began. Jockey Sammy Palumbo has been ailing and went to New York to see his family. He is scheduled to return to action today. Jockey John Hernandez is sporting a bruised left eye as the result of being struck by a clod Monday. Jockey Buddy Root, who always has performed in excellent style here, is the leading rider of the meeting. He was never better. The fans thought for a few minutes that old Spinach had bit the dust. However, Spinach was unhurt in that steeplechase pile-up. The accident, however, ended the career of Jackie, a 9-year-old son of Neddie A. A pistol shot sent him mercifully on his way after he broke a leg. General Manager Harry A. Manley, of Cumberland, was a visitor. He is all set for the meeting there which starts next Tuesday. Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan has ordered tents to take care of the overflow of horses. They can kid me if they want to, but I'm going to play $2 on Fatty for the rest of the season. Bill Shewbridge has been taking entries at Timonium for this track and has averaged 92 a day. Transferring the horses from that track to this is keeping several vans busy. Jockey Joe O'Malley, who has had more than his share of tough luck this summer, was slightly injured yesterday when tossed by On The Beam in the first race. He was forced to cancel his mounts for the day. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Gradatim turned in a good race last out and showed enough to warrant a top selection in a field of this sort. Quest D'Or is on the reserve list but will be a keen factor if sent postward. Kellys Lad is a possibility.

Second race—Seplin gets in this with a feather assignment and will have the capable Hernandez in the saddle. I believe this is the right combination. Windsors Chief has plenty of speed, likes the route and will be a keen contender. Fair Haired is speedy and has a chance.

Third race—Rouge Catalan had speed in spots while feeling out the course last out and may be ready for this test. Tam O'Shanter has been close and is dangerous. Redlander is far from the horse he once was but has a bit of class.

Fourth race—Barraca had trouble last out and turned in a good race regardless. Needs only a share of the racing luck. Small Change has been rested and is a fit one. Best Policy is in slick hands.

Fifth race—Royal Business failed last out. However, she is still the class of this field and is in light enough to win over a fast track. Double Back won that and goes on top if the track is muddy. Squabble may be better than generally rated.

Sixth race—Golden Key has the speed to take care of this gang. The weight and the route are right and I see no reason for mistakes. Tavern should go well if taken off the reserve list. Scullery Maid has shown speed at the milers.

Seventh race—Victory Light has shown enough to warrant selection on the top of these. Brooke Herod comes back to the small tracks and is reported good now. Tepin for the minor award.

Eighth race—Wayriel downed a somewhat similar gang last out and is ready for the test. Levena is in with a feather and may surprise. The Bosley-Black entry of Caffeine and Furr Buckle should get in the pay.

Best bet—Golden Key.

Dr. William Burdick, of Chevy Chase, tossed his big fish back after boating it off Ocean City, Md., this week but he permitted Capt. Jim Lombard to tag it first. Quarter Net of U. S. Steel Soars To $19,201,008, Near Decade High

$1,309,761 Earned In Like '39 Period; Operating Rate Reported 94 Pct.

By the Associated Press

New York, July 30.—United States Steel Corporation reported today that its net income in the second quarter of 1940 aggregated $19,201,008, with one exception the best for an April-May-June period since 1930.

It was a sharp gain from 1939, when only $1,309,761 was earned in the second quarter, and a little better than the first three months of 1940, in which net came to $17,113,995.

It was only two-thirds of the total for the last quarter of 1939, however, when the steel industry felt the first flush of war-inspired buying, and 53 per cent of the excellent results of the second quarter of 1937, the exception since 1930.

At 94 Per Cent Capacity

Irving S. Olds, chairman of the steel company, said in an interview after the quarterly directors' meeting that the company this week is operating at a little over 94 per cent of capacity in the second quarter.

Asked for his opinion about the Government's plan for permitting amortization of armament plant for tax purposes in five years instead of the standard 20 years, Olds said the company was delaying buying equipment to expand its heavy armor plate capacity pending clarification of the problem. He said:

"We are asked to increase our facilities for heavy armor plate for which orders will run for the next three to five years. There will probably not be much business for these products later. If we have to amortize over 20 years, our profits during the order period would be unusually large. There should be a much shorter time for amortization."

$1 Dividend Voted

U. S. Steel directors ordered a quarterly dividend of $1 on the common stock, payable September 20 to stock of record August 20, as well as the regular $1.75 payment on the preferred. This was the same amount on the common as in the previous quarter, which had been the first dividend since December, 1937. The second quarter net income, after preferred dividends, amounted to $1.48 a common share.

Olds appeared as chairman at his first quarterly meeting of steel directors. He succeeded Edward R. Stettinius, jr., last month, when Stettinius resigned to become a member of the Defense Commission in Washington.

Shipments in the second quarter were reported 4 per cent larger than those in the first quarter and 35 per cent greater than in the same period last year.

Shipments in the first half of the year were 63.2 per cent of capacity, compared with 49.4 per cent in the comparable period last year.

With the exception of the payment made in the previous quarter, nothing had been disbursed on the common stock since December, 1937, when $1 was paid.

Strange 'Marriage' . . .

New York, July 30 (AP).—A joint enterprise to speed output of synthetic rubber was announced today by the B. F. Goodrich Co. and the Phillips Petroleum Co.

They have formed the Hydrocarbon Chemical & Rubber Co., the announcement said, to "hasten the day when, if necessary, every American tire as well as the thousands of other rubber products can be made wholly with American rubber."

The Goodrich company, after years of research, recently announced commercial production of automobile tires from synthetic rubber. The new unit's headquarters will be Akron, also the principal offices of Goodrich.

Production, it was said, is being increased substantially to place samples in the hands of industrial and military users. Rapid progress was claimed in the adaption of the new product to many commercial needs.

Wheat Corn Rise Briskly

Buying Stimulated By Argentine Plan To Restrict Exports

By the Associated Press

Bullish demonstrations in the New York Stock Exchange and the Chicago wheat pit infused some life into commodity future markets yesterday on rising price scales.

Wheat pushed up 1 to 1½ cents a bushel, while corn advanced 1¼ to 1½ cents. Buying of the cereals was stimulated by an announcement that Argentina would put drastic restrictions on wheat exports.

New York cotton futures climbed 4 to 5 points in a slow market. Straits tin was posted ½ to ¾ of a cent higher, and hides moved up .17 to .22 of a cent a pound. Some rubber contracts were up as much as .21 of a cent a pound.

Anglo-Iranian Oil Passes Dividend

London, July 30 (AP).—Directors of Anglo-Iranian Oil Co., the huge firm operating the British oil concessions in Iran, took no action today on the final ordinary stock dividend for 1939.

The company reported net profits for 1939 of £2,986,258 compared with £6,109,477 in 1938.

Foreign Markets

London, July 30 (AP).—The stock market closed mainly dull, and prices reacted in the absence of public buying interest. Giltedged issues were comparatively steady. Industrials and home rails were lower on profit-taking and absence of support. Oil shares closed fractions above the day's lows after reacting on disappointing Anglo-Iranian Co., Ltd., dividend decision. Kaffirs were easier on cape and local liquidation. Copper and other base metal shares were inactive but steady.

A feature in the foreign bond section was strength of Brazilian issues, including the Sao Paulo coffee loan, on buying for sinking fund purposes. Japanese obligations were nominal and unchanged, but the undertone was weak on the arrest of British subjects.

Liverpool, July 30 (AP).—Cotton futures finished 4 to 9 points higher in quiet dealings today. Absence of any indications regarding the Government's future cotton import policy restricted selling. End of month trade calling met but limited hedge offerings.

Oil Output Gains in Week

110,050-Bbl. Increase Exceeds Estimate Of Mines' Bureau

By the United Press

New York, July 30.—Daily average crude oil production in the United States increased 110,050 barrels during the week ended July 27, totaling 3,690,400 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute reported today. A year ago daily production averaged 3,539,100 barrels.

An advance of 186,150 barrels in Texas output more than offset a drop of 42,050 barrels in Illinois production and smaller declines in other areas. It was the first time in four weeks that daily production had exceeded the Bureau of Mines' estimated requirements.

Operations or reporting refineries increased slightly during the week to 82.1 per cent of potential capacity from 81.6 the previous week. Runs of crude oil to stills for the industry as a whole were estimated at 3,555,000 barrels a day compared with 3,540,000 the week before and 3,448,000 a year ago.

The institute placed gasoline production during the week at 11,474,000 barrels, up from 11,378,000 the previous week. Stocks of finished and unfinished gasoline declined to 90,173,000 barrels at the end of the week compared with 91,789,000 barrels the week before and 78,158,000 a year ago.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, July 30 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—A few mill buyers and topmakers were making inquiries today for wools on the Boston market, but sales were generally of small volume.

Bids were inclined to be a little lower than last week, but most dealers were not ready to shade prices except in small lots. Country-graded ⅜ and ¼-blood bright fleeces were being offered at 38@40 cents, in the grease, delivered East, but mills apparently are not interested in purchasing at this level.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—Hogs declined further today, prices generally were 10 to 25 cents off with the top falling to 6.40. Cattle were steady to weak in very dull trade. Spring lambs were 10 to 15 cents lower.

Opening with a few early sales 10 to 15 cents lower in a slow and draggy market, hog prices later fell 15 to 25 cents with some spots 25 cents lower. Receipts totaled 18,000 with 3,000 direct to packers. Diminished consumer demand due to the heat together with lower hog prices brought about another ¼ cent drop in best wholesale pork loin prices which now stand at 15½ cents a pound.

Demand in the cattle market was extremely narrow on both local and outside accounts. Small receipts were the only stimulating factor but with little effect inasmuch as intense heat had a decidedly depressing influence.

ContractBridge

F. L. S. was pleased when a false card fooled his opponent, an intercollegiate pair champion of '39. F. L. S.'s tossing of a queen induced a favorable shift, which allowed him to make his five-spade contract.

He writes: "West was an old friend of mine, C. R. W., intercollegiate pairs champion from Cornell in '39. My partner was a Columbia University Club team player (I also went to Columbia).

"I was pleased at my success in fooling the enemy. The diamond king was opened; I threw the queen, so West shifted to a club, having the heart king-jack. On the club king and queen I threw two diamonds to complete my ruse, and finessed the spades, which succeeded; drew trumps, ran the spades.

Six Instead of Set

"The opponents each saved a heart for the last trick, so I made my fourth diamond, winning six odd, when I was expecting to go down one, as West, though not holding higher than the five and four of diamonds, would have played high-low and won a ruff if diamonds had been continued.

Some news and notes of radio:

In the interest of the country's national defense efforts, Maj. Edward Bowes, famed "Amateur Hour" impresario of CBS, has enrolled his 81-foot yacht, the Edmar, for any emergency use the United States Coast Guard may have for it. The luxurious craft, powered by two 300-horsepower engines and capable of a speed of 25 knots, is listed as belonging to Flotilla No. 6, Southern New York Division of the Coast Guard Reserve.

Martin Gabel, the actor you hear every day on WJSV in the dramatic show, "Big Sister," is one person who really loves his work—and we can prove it. Gabel is a member of the Wharton-Gabel Corporation, backers of the stage hit, "Life With Father." Thus far the play has netted well over a quarter of a million dollars. But still Mr. Gabel appears faithfully every day in the radio studios, much more interested in fulfilling his microphone stint than in counting his profits from big business. (Well, just as much anyhow.)

Stoopnagle fans will be delirious to know that their favorite comedian, Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle, has been signed by CBS for a new fall series, appropriately called "Col. Stoopnagle's Quixie-Doodles." Starting September 29, it will be heard every Sunday from 4:30 to 5 p. m.

Today's Radio Highlights

12 noon, WOL—Put on by one of those confession magazines, I'll Never Forget offers dramatizations of allegedly true incidents. Letters are the basis of this new program.

1, WMAL—"How to Make Money at Home" is a little matter we'd all like to have carefully and convincingly explained. Jeanette Ware will discuss this topic for the ladies on Let's Talk It Over every other week.

7, WMAL—Through the seismograph, the electric eye and American science, This Our America discloses that our country's scientists are learning to make substitutes for raw materials which the United States does not have to take the place of imported goods.

7:30, WOL—Columbia's Dr. Henry Lee Smith is still at it in his Where Are You From? deductions.

7:30, WMAL—"Kathryn the First" is a sleek career woman on the Manhattan at Midnight series. She outwits a business rival but in steps l'amour and she's right back where she started.

8:30, WJSV—John Coriglano is soloists with the New York Philharmonic Symphony at Lewishon Stadium, playing the Vieuxtemps Conncerto No. 4 for violin.

9:20, WOL—Kathryn Witwer returns to the Pageant of Melody to sing Mrs. Beach's "Ah, Love but a Day" and to join Attilio Baggiore in songs of Edward Grieg.

9:30, WMAL—Kirsten Flagstad sings for the first time at the Watergate with the National Symphony Orchestra, Edwin McArthur conducting. The prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and the Ride of the Valkyries preceed Madam Flagstad's celebrated singing of the immolation scene from "Goetterdaemmerung."

Lewis Charges Both Parties With Failure In Provisions for Nation's Unemployed

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HERE COMES THE CHIEF!—This was the riotous welcome delegates to the national convention of the United Automobile Workers of America gave to John L. Lewis (center), C. I. O. chieftain, as he entered their meeting room in St. Louis yesterday

C.I.O. Leader Claims Millions of Americans Have Inadequate Income

St. Louis, July 30 (AP).—Skirting any mention of the coming Presidential campaign, John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president, declared today both major political parties had failed to face the problems of unemployment and inadequate income for millions of Americans.

Lewis said therewere 10,700,000 unemployed in the country, including 3,500,000 young men and women between the ages of 19 and 24, and a national study of 29,000,000 families had shown that 19,000,000 "subsist on a family income of $89 a month."

Speaking at the convention of the United Automobile Workers of America, second largest union in the C. I. O., Lewis said:

"That is what is the matter with America—an insufficient national income to permit the population to consume our own production."

Declaring the platforms of both parties fail to state "what they're going to do about it," Lewis said:

"Some day the people of this country are going to lose confidence in the existing political parties to such a degree that they are going to form their own party."

That, he added, was "for the future to develop."

Lewis denounced compulsory military training proposals and demanded that the Government "refrain from giving its business to concerns that deny the rights of labor."

The national defense program, he said, was "making it profitable for industry to be patriotic," but he asserted firms receiving Government orders "have just as much moral compulsion to accept the Wagner Labor Relations Act as they have to observe State laws against stealing chickens."

Lewis asserted enactment of pending conscription legislation would be "planting the seeds of destruction and paving the way for a new imperialistic nation within the confines of the United States."

"I wonder," he commented, "if in our zeal to protect our country from the shadow of Hitler, we are not using some of Hitler's methods that will in the end proscribe our civil liberties and create social confusion and unrest to the point that will bring about the very conditions we are trying to escape."

Wagner Holds Hope for Loans

By the Associated Press

Despite Republican opposition, Chairman Wagner (Democrat, New York) predicted yesterday that the Senate Banking Committee would approve President Roosevelt's request for $500,000,000 fund to help Latin America meet its trade problems.

Wagner said the Banking Committee should be able to complete a draft of legislation expanding the capital and lending authority of the Government's Export-Import Bank at an executive session today.

Jesse H. Jones, Federal Loan administrator, told Senators today that the funds would be used to help Latin-American nations "stabilize their economics and market their surplus products without cutthroat competition."

"Idiotic," Says Taft

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, who fired a long series of critical questions at Jones, said afterward that it was "perfectly idiotic to use this country's funds for the purpose of trying to hold South American surpluses off European markets.

"This was the only purpose mentioned by President Roosevelt in his message to Congress," Taft said, adding that the five Republicans on the Banking Committee were "solidly opposed to this."

During a lively discussion of broad legislation offered to increase the lending powers of the Export-Import Bank from $200,000,000 to $700,000,000, Jones agreed to two limitations suggested by the Senate committee.

Limit on Borrowing Power

The first would prohibit any loans under the new program that would violate the Johnson Act, which prohibits credits for nations in default of World War debts to this country, or the Neutrality Act, which bars credits for belligerents.

The second would limit expansion of borrowing power of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to $1,000,000,000 for the Export-Import and national defense programs. The original draft placed no limits on this borrowing power.

Aside from the "good neighbor" policy toward other American nations, Jones told Senators that the Administration had no definite plans or programs for use of the $500,000,000 additional asked by the President.

Loans May Buy Arms

Under questioning, the loan administrator later said that part of the funds might be used by Latin-American nations for armaments.

"We would rather take orders for armaments than let them go to foreign countries," Jones said.

"We ought to let the orders go to foreign countries because we need the production ourselves," Taft observed.

U. S. Is Undefeated in Effort to Maintain Liberal Trade Principles, President Says

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, July 30.—President Roosevelt tonight rejected the idea that the United States has been defeated in its efforts to maintain "liberal trade principles" and asserted that if it adopted "totalitarian control" over foreign trade it would be taking a step toward economic dictatorship.

He called for "the closest possible economic cooperation with other countries, particularly with those of the Western Hemisphere," and said that course would safeguard the progress made under the trade agreement program.

In a message to the National Foreign Trade convention, the President wrote that it had been "suggested or implied by a few faint-hearted defeatists in recent weeks that we should abandon our efforts to conduct foreign trade on the basis of liberal and democratic principles."

He said the logic of such implications, if true, would "lead us to embark on a course of action which would subject our producers, consumers and foreign traders, and ultimately the entire nation, to the regimentation of a totalitarian system . . ."

The President pledged the Government's cooperation to maintain liberal trade principles.

Despite the extreme shrinkage of trade between Europe and the United States by the drastic trade control restrictions imposed by some countries, Mr. Roosevelt said, the "substantial progress made during the last six years in our efforts to maintain trade between free nations on the basis of the liberal and democratic principles which underlie our trade agreement program has not by any means been lost."

Convention speakers have stressed the likelihood of totalitarian blocs bidding frantically for South American trade through barter or some exchange process and thus trying to undersell and outdo the United States. Some have suggested that this country might invoke the barter system pending the restoration of peacetime economic conditions.

Development of closer economic relations among the American republics is the basic need of the defense and prosperity of the Americas, Assistant Secretary of State Henry F. Grady told the convention.

Speaking of the problem of Latin American export surpluses, he said:

"Nearly half of their exports in 1937 were sold to Europe, but that trade is now disrupted as a result of the war.

"If the burden on Latin America of accumulating stocks of export surpluses is permitted to grow, it may be expected that the resistance of the American republics to economic penetration from the old world will be undermined and weakened."
